What's your Screen worth?

Apparently it's worth plenty to those who want to buy it! Commercial advertisers place a high value on the use of your screen to sell their goods. So why shouldn't you do the same?

That screen is YOUR best advertising medium—it can be your best ticket-seller. Don't waste it by using unshowmanlike trailers.

A good trailer on your screen is the lowest-cost advertising you can buy. Ever stop to think how little National Screen Service costs?

When the BEST is so cheap, there is no economy in using make-shift stuff on that valuable screen. In fact, that is extravagance and unfair to your box-office!

National Screen Pre-vues are built to sell tickets—by showmen who have studied screen-salesmanship for years.

Americanism Keynote Sounded for '39

By MAURICE KANN

ITS Americanism for 1939 and, perhaps considerably beyond.

Unaccompanied by the fanfare which normally goes along with industry policy moves, Hollywood schedules have been overhauled to put production in conformance with the temper and the mandate of the decision. Thus, from every lot and in a variety of forms the virtues of America are to be emblazoned upon the screens of this country first and later upon those of the rest of the world, barring only those nations where existing governments, for their own good reasons, blackball, or make it difficult for American product to continue an uninterrupted course in their long since established markets.

The plan has been publicly discussed in two different directions. Jack L. Warner, reiterating a policy established by Warner Bros. months ago, recently voiced his belief that the time had come when audiences in this country should be made increasingly aware and further conscious of the benefits of democracy; then he added this belief will reflect itself in this studio's output this year.

Shortly thereafter came confirmation and substantiation when Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of 20th Century-Fox, spoke over a national radio hookup as the sole representative of the film business in a symposium highlighting general industry's anticipations for the year. He said in connection with the new drift:

"Americans have always been proud of the supremacy of their motion pictures throughout the world. It is our purpose in 1939 to maintain that supremacy beyond question. But we propose also during the coming year to make the American public more proud than ever of their nation, their history and the system of free government under which we are privileged to live."

Thereby, in effect and actually, was made the pronouncement of the entire industry's policy. But, while little is being said by way of intent, a great deal is being done by way of activity in furthering that intent.

As a matter of fact, and as editorially treated in BOXOFFICE from time to time, what is happening in Hollywood is a reflection of the decision of the heads of the industry in New York, easily is one of the significant developments in recent trade history.

It is a reflection of world conditions, brought the more sharply into relief by the official Washington attitude toward the dictator nations of Europe as constantly reiterated by various statements of the President and members of his cabinet, notably Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes. While President Roosevelt, in accordance with diplomatic observance, avoids specific mention of nations by name so long as this country is at peace with them, Secretary Ickes has been far more to the point in naming governments and individuals.

In pursuing this course, which is official and semi-official, these representatives of the government very obviously have economic considerations as well as the public conscience in mind. They potentially understand the commercial conflict which poses itself along lines now drawn and drawing tighter between the totalitarian and the democratic forms of government, and, of course, they are aware of the fast approaching economic conflict which is centering in South America.

In any consideration such as this, the film industry cannot hope to find itself exempted, nor does it expect to constitute an exception in an international situation embroiling the world complete. The pressure with which other industries are finding themselves confronted now and the pressure which all responsible observers agree is yet to come, therefore, comprise a major problem for motion pictures and their future security.

It has been determined, as a consequence, that something must be done about it and the Americanism oboe note has been hit upon as the way. The plan, of such vital interest to all in the industry, is assuming a two-fold complexion. One phase of it directly has to do with holding commercial advantages now enjoyed. The other, which is earmarked with every chance that the industry will establish itself as a most significant factor in influencing public opinion here and around the globe, sets it up as an unprecedented champion in the cause of free government.

It ought to be made clear quickly the program does not contemplate any conversion of an entertainment medium into a medium for propaganda. The entertainment formula will be observed in keeping with the industry's commercial fundamental of manufacturing product that will sell tickets at the boxoffice. But the conviction is this can be maintained without sacrifice through a more careful sifting of source material and a concentration, not too predominant, upon types of stories which will overturn the American system; and, by their inference, if not by their direct impact, drive home a realization of the benefits of this form of government by comparison with European styles which regiment the individual and submerge him to the dictatorial mandates of the state.

There apparently is no intention of showing flag-waving down the throats of the paying public. Certainly, it is assumed in this discussion no such crude hammer blows will be swung. But if a Bing Crosby can essay a "Star Maker" and, in the telling of the career of a Gus Edwards suggest strongly the land of opportunity which America traditionally has been accepted as being by the world at large, the point thereby established, it should be at once understandable, will become obvious.

It is left such treatment, which, of course, is not representative of a new idea, will meet all expected entertainment requirements and, thus, the obligations of the producer to the exhibitor and the public. But it is also left the other underlying purpose can be accomplished as the routine and required job of making the product proceeds.

While the domestic exhibitor rarely concerns himself with any industry problems rearing their troublesome heads immediately outside his own sphere, the time may be said to have arrived when pressure of circumstances induced by a business which currently gets anywhere from 35 to 50 cents of its total dollar from impressive, if endangered, foreign sales will bring about an altered point of view. Even if the showman here continues his indifference, the changes in the processes of his business mentality eventually will be enforced upon him by the distributor who faces no other alternative as the industry, nationally and internationally, is presently constituted.

The hope, of course, prevails no dislocation of the American scene will be necessary. It is in the calculation that the Americanism program, while conforming to and, if lucky, increasing the drawing power of Hollywood output in domestic theatres, will also appeal to the foreign audiences so essential to industry sustenance. Thus, the front contemplated is not compressed within the borders of continental United States, but will girdle the globe.

As this is posed in the straight economic approach, the industry by the same juncture may easily prove to be a great international force in driving home the blessings of the democratic way merely by continuing to tell, always in a coating of entertainment, the why, the wherefore and the how of the American way. No more essential, no more potentially significant development has ever stuck its head above the routine Hollywood skyline.

The opportunity is enormous, fraught with the most far-reaching consequences for world good and representative of the sort of task this industry, by the inherent characteristics of the medium in which it deals, should undertake to do in duty-bound.

1938 An Eventful Year in Hollywood

By IVAN SPEAR

VIEWING, in retrospect, industry developments in the film capital during 1938, one must necessarily arrive at the conclusion that one of the most important, and certainly the most impressive, features thereof was the rapid and unprecedented growth of liberalism—its varied quarters and with almost limitless ramifications.

This enhancement of democratic sentiment reflected itself principally on two fronts.

The recognition, support and cooperation that has been won by such groups as the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and kindred organizations—the Motion Picture Artists Committee, the Motion Picture Democratic Committee and others.

Victories that were gained by labor unions and Guilds in relationships with production organizations, in a year marked by the most turbulent producer-labor and inter-factional developments in film history.

The Anti-Nazi League had been in existence for several years—in fact, ever since the inception of the German Nazi regime. Not until troubled European conditions manifested themselves with renewed vigor in March, however, did the League's activities begin to assume more than run-of-the-mill importance in the Hollywood picture, or take the first steps toward winning industry support — in that for the League itself, at least for the movements on which its campaigns are based. At that time the Austrian "Anschluss," the Sino-Japanese War and the Spanish Revolution placed universal unrest at a peak; and the League, supported by the MPAC, began determined drives to urge American boycotts of Italian, German and Japanese products, working tirelessly and with increasingly evident results. One of the greatest single factors leading to increased cooperation with League principles on the part of production names came with foreign protests against the blockade of Walter Wanger's "Blockade," comprised with scattered picketing of American theatres showing the film by elements opposed to the Spanish Loyalist cause and to "propaganda" pictures in general. Immediately, under League sponsorship, was organized the Freedom of the Screen Committee, later absorbed by the Association of American Screen Jurists.

In mid-year came formation of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, including scores of Theatrical, directorial, writing and production names, and the activity of which, in the California gubernatorial campaign, was held in large measure responsible for the Democratic victory.

It was not until late in the year, however, that two developments occurred, which drew major attention to the League and its liberal members. First—and more important from a public than from an industry standpoint — was the League's crusade against Henry Allen and the Militant Christian Patriots as disseminators of anti-industry, anti-Semitic literature. Second was the organization of the Committee of 56, probably the foremost concrete achievement in gaining support of such production names as Jack L. and Harry Warner, Joseph M. Schenck and others of similar status and calibre—who, heretofore, had watched the progressives' progress with tolerant—but it must be admitted, none-too-helpful—eyes.

Insofar as this phase of the growth of liberalism in 1938 was concerned, the year closed on a high note, with nearly every studio—paced by Warner Bros.—announcing plans for production of films of patriotic import, stressing a belief in American fundamentals and attacking, through implication, totalitarianism, dictatorship, oppression and other political and economic theories and practices against which the League and its sister organizations had been fighting their year-old battle.

The labor front was dotted with manifold and significant gains. 1938's first quarter found unionism, Guild growth and inter-jurisdictional disputes sidetracked by a devastating economy wave and production dip. In mid-year, however, came the most potent single achievement—victory by the Screen Writers Guild over the rival Screen Playwrights in an election ordered by the National Labor Relations Board—even though it reached an anti-climax when producers refused to open bargaining negotiations and the case reverted to the NLRB for further action. The Screen Actors Guild asserted its constantly-growing power by, with comparatively little trouble, negotiating a new eight-year Guild shop pact with the producers and by embarking on a far-reaching program to revise the relationships between its members and talent agents, resulting in the drafting of a licensing plan to which the ten percenters, after a brief attempt at combating it, were forced to indicate their capitulation.

Not so fortunate was the Screen Directors Guild. After several gestures toward opening negotiations with producers for a closed shop agreement, the megaphonists turned to the NLRB for assistance and a lengthy hearing was conducted—results of which are still pending.

Throughout the year loomed the spectre of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, which often reiterated, but never specifically launched upon, a plan to assert jurisdiction over every film worker—including the three leading talent organizations.

Came the last quarter and an important change in working conditions for several thousand studio employees when the federal government's wage-hour law became nationally effective, followed by the possibility of another far-reaching change with the announcement that serious study was being given the feasibility of adopting an industry-wide five-day work week. In direct opposition to the cheerless outlook in the early days of 1938, thousands of studio employees were assured a prosperous holiday season when, during December, production boomed to new record marks.

Thus, a survey of the important Hollywood developments within the 12-month period clearly shows that these factors, and their various attendant ramifications and repercussions, threaded a constant and uninterrupted course—in most instances overshadowing other intra-industry achievements, whether economic or social, and briefly reviewed as follows:

January—The Screen Writers Guild-Screen Playwrights, Inc., battle continues unabated as year opens. Sam Briskin resigns as studio chief of RKO Radio, sending plant into attack of jitter; Selznick International-Metro deal blows up.

February—Grand National files bankruptcy petition; actors, writers and directors' Guilds unite against IATSE's threat to assume jurisdiction over all film workers. Academy names annual Awards candidates; Joseph Schenck bars Agent Myron Selznick from 20th Century-Fox lot.

March—"The Life of Emile Zola," Luise Rainer, Spencer Tracy, win Academy Awards; Hollywood Anti-Nazi League gains active voice by attacking Reinhold Schunke, German directorial import of M-G-M, as a Nazi, and by petitioning President Roosevelt to protest annexation of Austria; production hits new low as studio economy purge gains ground.

April—Anti-Fascists hear Exile Thomas Mann at mass meeting; Anti-Nazi League charges two German-made films are being released here as French product; producers signify they will heed Will Hays' report urging avoidance of propaganda in films; Motion Picture Artists Committee hosts four delegates of Spanish Loyalists; SWG, dozen unions mass against IATSE.

May—Walter Wanger reveals foreign pressure brought against release of "Blockade"; Republic hold sales convention; Screen Directors Guild, producers slap each other by mail as peace negotiations blow up; Goldwyn attacks dual bills; Cliff Work becomes Universal's new studio pilot; Hal Roach announces United Artists distribution deal.

June—Anti-Nazi League holds giant mass meeting; National Labor Relations Board rules writers are employees, orders SWG-SP election; Academy announces plan to reorganize; SAG-producer parleys on new pact collapse.

July—SWG defeats SP in election and producers file protest; SDG blames industry woes on "production system in its executive branches"; IATSE begins drive to control all studio labor; liberal Holly-

Foreign Language Film Imports Rise

By DAVE GOLDING

A CONTINUAL increase in the number of foreign language pictures imported into the United States for 1939 is indicated by the interest shown in British and French productions. Considerable activity is manifested in independent distribution circles with an eye to earning the best product from those two countries.

In 1938, it is estimated 36 distributors, including five of the majors, imported 259 pictures. Despite the fact that product from Germany topped the list with 55, the total reflects an approximate decrease of 20 per cent over 1937.

British pictures showed a slight increase with 54, but the greatest rise was shown by French films with 45, almost a 100 per cent. Hungarian films reflected a similar upswing with 42 distributed here in 1938. There were 21 Italian and 20 Russian pictures, each country showing a slight gain.

Most disturbing to Hollywood is the manner which such English pictures as "The Lady Vanishes," "To the Victor," "Pygmalion," "The Citadel," and French pictures such as "Grand Illusion" and "Carnet de Bal," were accorded places of honor in the "ten best" polls of the year.

The majors, however, are cognizant of the value of some of the productions made abroad. M-G-M is seeking to follow the successful formula of "A Yank at Oxford" and "The Citadel" and, in addition, has secured distribution rights to the Show plays which will be produced in England.

RKO is anticipating two-to-four from Herbert Wilcox and United Artists approximately six from London Films, while 20th-Fox expects to increase the number of British pictures that will be distributed here. Warner and Paramount also will include English-made product on its program the coming year.

The cessation of activities by Gaumont British will in no way affect the number of British pictures distributed here during the year since production facilities have been merged with 20th Century-Fox's in England and films made at the Gaumont studios will reach the domestic market through 20th Century-Fox.

Columbia already occupies a place among importers of foreign pictures. A subsidiary, Famous Foreign Films, has been formed and in 1938 distributed two French pictures. Plans call for eight more in 1939. In addition, Columbia is planning to distribute its British quota films here.

In line with the growing interest in foreign production mounts, is the statement from Budd Rogers, general manager in America for Mayflower-Pomer-Loughton Productions and acting head of Famous Foreign Films, who predicts the year will top all records for British pictures shown in this country, both from the standpoint of quality and quantity. Roger stresses his opinion geography is no barrier to production and talent is still the all-important factor regardless of the location of the studio.

According to the survey among independent distributors, the coming year should also break records for the importation of French films. Foremost among the new organizations that will handle product from France in the hope of hitting the jackpot with another "Mayerling" is Tri-National under the aegis of John E. Otterson. National Pictures is another new company planning to handle about ten during 1939. All down the line, as a matter of fact, distributors are evincing interest in French pictures, the forecast for the year indicating 75 will reach the market by approximately December 31.

Distributors handling product from the Central European countries, notably Hungary, are doubtful about the number to be available for importation because of the growing influence of Nazi penetration.

Austrian production, of course, has been wiped out and the few distributors who handled that product will no longer touch the films with the German label since they claim there is no market for them.

On the other hand the resentment against the recent acts of Nazi Germany apparently have no effects on the number of German pictures that will be brought over here in the coming year, although playdate totals are sharply down. Queries at the Casino exchange and UFA, the two remaining distributors of German films, reveal a substantial increase in the number for 1939 is expected.

The distributor with the greatest variety of foreign product is J. H. Hollberg who had on his program pictures from England, Ireland, France, Sweden, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Holland. Modern Film Co. brought over the only Chinese film.

A recapitulation of the pictures imported and distributed here in 1938 follows:

Germany	55
England	54
France	45
Hungary	42
Italy	21
Russia	20
Ireland	20
*Poland	7
Czechoslovakia	4
Sweden	2
Austria	1
China	1
Holland	1

wood, inspired by Anti-Nazi League, slaps "organized minorities," inspired by picketing of Wanger's "Blockade," and is instrumental in formation of Freedom of Screen Committee with Wanger at its head.

August—Liberals have busy month as MPAC stages "Sticks and Stones," political satire, Anti-Nazi League holds Mooney mass meeting, demands dissolution House of Representatives' Dies Committee after group charges Hollywood is "rife with communism;" Motion Picture Democratic Committee stages Democratic parade; GN, Educational announce merger; reorganization; SDG files NLRB charges against producers.

September—SWG-producer negotiations collapse, SWG files "unfair" charges with NLRB; SAG takes steps to license agents after Guild conservatives win annual election; Academy reorganization plan shelved when W. S. Van Dyke, Frank Capra offer to quit because of "Academy antagonism toward Guilds;" American Association of Screen Audiences organizes branch here, absorbing Wanger's Freedom of the Screen Committee.

October—Anti-Nazi League charges

Henry Allen and Militant Christian Patriots with being instrumental for distribution scurrilous anti-industry, anti-Semitic pamphlets; SAG abolishes Junior Guild, setting up A and B brackets, signs new eight-year pact with producers; Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes speaks at Anti-Nazi League mass meeting; NLRB winds up SDG hearing; studios baffled by Federal wage-hour law but try to work out its application; IATSE jurisdiction attacked in three challenges filed with NLRB.

November—First evidences of new Americanism trend in forthcoming product seen; liberals stage gigantic Peace Parade; SAG, though attacked by two jurisdictional challenges, wins victories over Artists Managers Guild and newly-revived independent producers' association; SWG holds annual election.

December—Anti-Nazi League successfully pleads with Hollywood to close the doors on Fraulein Leni Riefenstahl, Nazi film star, in visit here; Committee of 56 organizes, sets about collecting 20,000,000 signatures to Declaration of Economic Independence from Nazi Germany; producers don cloak of reluctance, begin considering and filming Americanism, anti-Fascist themes in landslide proportions; production booms to new highs as year closes.

"THE YOUNG IN HEART" starring JANET GAYNOR, DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR. and PAULETTE GODDARD, with ROLAND YOUNG, BILLIE BURKE, Minnie Dupree, Henry Stephenson and introducing RICHARD CARLSON. From L.A.R. Wylie's Saturday Evening Post serial, "The Gay Banditti" Adaptation by Charles Bennett; screen play by Paul Osborn. Directed by Richard Wallace. Released thru United Artists.

"MADE FOR EACH OTHER" starring CAROLE LOMBARD and JAMES STEWART, with Charles Coburn and Lucile Watson. Miss Lombard returns to serious drama after the mad-cap comedy cycle. Story and screen play by Jo Swerling. Directed by John Cromwell. Released thru United Artists.

"REBECCA": Daphne du Maurier's powerful novel, bought from galley-proofs in advance of publication for $50,000, as was "Gone With The Wind," and already a runner-up to that novel's tremendous popularity. In England, Miss du Maurier's "Rebecca," far outstripped the author's former best-seller, "Jamaica Inn," by selling more than 50,000 copies in the first month of publication as an English Book Society selection. In the United States it is a Literary Guild selection destined for the largest printing ever awarded one of their novels. "Rebecca" will be directed by the renowned Alfred Hitchcock after he has completed "Titanic" for Selznick International.

"GONE WITH THE WIND" starring CLARK GABLE as Rhett Butler and Margaret Mitchell's best-seller novel of the same title. Screen play by Sidney Howard. Directed by George Cukor. Filmed in the true-life hues of Technicolor. Production designed by William Cameron Menzies, and faithfully adhering to the history of the South under the technical advice of Wilbur G. Kurtz, famous authority on the city of Atlanta, as it appeared in Scarlett O'Hara's day. Costumes by Walter Plunkett, who spent six months touring the South for authentic models and materials of the Civil War era. Released thru Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"TITANIC" Film dramatization of the greatest catastrophe in modern maritime history, the sinking of the S.S. Titanic on her maiden voyage from Southampton to New York in 1912. To be directed by England's outstanding motion picture director, Alfred Hitchcock.

"SECOND MEETING" Like I. A. R. Wylie's "The Young in Heart," this new novel by Lucian Cary also was published serially in the Saturday Evening Post and polled record reader-interest before purchase by Selznick International as a property of assured national popularity.

I am preparing this year two^{or} more BERNARD SHAW pictures—the first, “THE DOCTOR’S DILEMMA,” to be filmed in England; the second, “THE DEVIL’S DISCIPLE,” for Hollywood production—and two pictures starring WENDY HILLER, of which “MAJOR BARBARA” will be the first.

I PROMISE to my friend BERNARD SHAW, to my ENGLISH AND AMERICAN DISTRIBUTORS, and to ALL EXHIBITORS, that I will come up to the expectations they have in me as a Producer, and will try my best not to disappoint them after the kind reception “PYGMALION” had throughout the world.

POPULARITY

Exhibitors, Press and Public Film Groups Make Selections

The All-American Favorites of 1938

THE public is quite steadfast in its loyalty to its screen favorites. This fact is strongly established in the cross-sectional nationwide vote naming the All-American Screen Favorites of 1938, polled by BOXOFFICE. The results of this ballot displace but three of the favorites of the previous year and these three are still well up on the list of Runners-Up in the public's esteem. The three new members on the "first team" scaled the heights to popular favor with unusual rapidity. One of these, Mickey Rooney, in the short jump of two years came up literally out of nowhere into the fifth position of popularity. Mickey was way down on the list in 1936, barely above Honorable Mention, and didn't even make that class in 1937.

Deanna Durbin also took a notable jump from 19th place in 1937 to sixth position in 1938. Deanna was a sensation in her very first starring picture, released near the end of 1936, but that was not sufficient, despite its strong boxoffice rating, to establish her among the top favorites in the 1937 poll.

Tyrone Power is another personality who achieved star ranking in his first stellar role. He rose from 28th place in 1937 to ninth in 1938.

Shirley Temple retains her constancy among first-rankers, although she is unseated from first place by Spencer Tracy, who was seventh last year. Clark Gable jumps from fourth place last year to second in 1938. Myrna Loy holds on to third place. Paul Muni, Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert, Ronald Colman and Jeanette MacDonald hold their own quite well, although Miss MacDonald drops from eighth to twelfth place.

William Powell, Robert Taylor and Sonja Henie, in second, tenth and twelfth place, respectively, on the 1937 "first team" take near-top ranking in the Runners-Up of 1938.

THE WINNERS

1. Spencer Tracy
2. Clark Gable
3. Myrna Loy
4. Shirley Temple
5. Mickey Rooney
6. Deanna Durbin
7. Paul Muni
8. Gary Cooper
9. Tyrone Power
10. Claudette Colbert
11. Ronald Colman
12. Jeanette MacDonald

BOXOFFICE's popularity poll is not made solely on a "cash receipts" basis. It has been proved time and again that the dollar mark is not always unaltering as a gauge of screen star popularity. Picture failures more often are due to poor story material than to performances of their leading players. Picture success, given impetus by the attraction-value of popular starring favorites, attributable as well to the quality of the story, direction, production and other values that combine to make the whole. Also there is to be considered the effort put behind the selling of a picture to the public.

To bridge the wide differences in public tastes it is necessary to go beyond a single method of plumb-ing the public's reactions. True, the boxoffice tells an important success story. But, since there is often such a wide variance in the financial success of one picture compared with another starring the same top player or players, it is evident that a player's popularity cannot be wholly tied to the dollar-pull of the vehicle alone. In view of these facts, BOXOFFICE has figuratively taken the public pulse through its nationwide cross-section poll among motion picture editors on newspaper staffs, independent exhibitors, who, because they are unaffiliated with producer-distributor operations, assure an unbiased vote, the National Screen Council, which monthly selects the picture to receive the BOXOFFICE Blue Ribbon Award and which is composed of motion picture editors, civic organization leaders representing the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the International Catholic Alumnae, various Better Films Leagues and other organizations actively engaged in the interests of better motion pictures.

Thus the group of players that gathered more money at the boxoffice throughout the land and more firmly entrenched themselves as popular favorites with the public during the past year are those who won places on the First Team of the All-American Screen Favorites of 1938.

Of the 12 personalities chosen for the All-American all but three appeared in two or more pictures released within the year. It has been similarly noted in the polls of previous years that public and trade popularity is cultivated more by the players who make several pictures a year than by those who make only one.

In the parlance of the sports world, the Runners-Up may be termed the Second Team. And, as is the rule with second teams, all First Team potentials, they always outnumber the first teams. Thus, 24 have been grouped into the Runners-Up classification. Next in rank is the Medalists and Honorable Mention is given to those for whom votes were cast in the poll.

Gene Autry No. 1 Action Favorite of '38

"IF men may come and men may go, but I go on forever."

When Tennyson wrote that he might well have had the western and action picture in mind, for that famous line from his famous poem aptly applies to pictures of the outdoors type whose riding heroes in this day swing a guitar and a tune with the deftness that their forebears swung a lasso.

Year in and year out the pictures of the great open spaces continue as entertainment favorites of a vast part of the motion picture public. While these pictures seldom reach the screens of the million dollar palaces in the big cities, they are "regulars" at de luxe neighborhood houses in the metropolitan centers and in the small cities and hamlets spread from one coast to the other. Even in foreign markets the western and outdoor action picture has a high mark of popularity.

The men of the prairie operas are as sturdy as their type of pictures judging from the length of the careers of many of them. Some, still in the top rank of leading favorites, have been roping steers and chasing villains for a decade and longer. New faces make their appearance with every new season, some coming from the training ranks of supporting players. But the old reliables hold on to their popularity while the newcomers are earning their spurs in their ride toward permanent stardom.

With the new vogue of musical westerns started two seasons ago by Gene Autry, most recent stellar additions to the western productions have been of the singing-cowboy type. Gene Autry still is the No. 1 action favorite in BOXOFFICE's popularity poll, repeating his record of last year. William Boyd (who doesn't croon) wins second place, coming up from third last year. George O'Brien, given more to "straight" outdoor parts, drops from second to third place. Jack Holt, another of the straight he-man types and whose pictures are more action than outdoor, comes up one notch, trading fifth for fourth position with Buck Jones. Tex Ritter, a newcomer, who entered the field over a year ago, production started last year, comes among the leaders. Ken Maynard holds to his last year's place of seventh. Roy Rogers, another newcomer who made his start just this season, scores with eighth place, thus dropping Harry Carey (who has been going on and on for about two decades) to ninth position. The Three Mesquiteers poll tenth place as a team.

Dick Foran and Jimmy Ellison, sixth and ninth place, respectively, in last year's poll, left the ranks of the westerners this season. Foran, however, still got a place high up in the runners-up. Tom Mix, tenth last year, though he has been seen mainly in silent reissues, still retains considerable following and also is near the top on the runners-up group.

All others named in the poll are given in order of votes received as follows: Johnny Mack Brown, Dick Foran, Tom Mix, Hoot Gibson, Smith Ballew, Noah Beery Jr., Smiley Burnette, Buster Crabbe, Bob Livingston, Tom Keene, Reb Russell, Charles Starrett, John Wayne and "Big Boy" Guinn Williams.

CONCENTRATION CAMP CASES . . . No. 71,419

Illustration from "Das Deutsche Volk Klagt An"

ONCE HE WAS A LEADING FILM PRODUCER in Germany! . . . A graduate of Strassburg University, magna cum laude. He played the violin expertly, and world-famous celebrities relished his musical soirees. He gave liberally to all charities . . . Once he had a wife, and a mother. Both committed suicide. His two children are dead, too . . . Once renowned actors, directors and authors begged for the chance to work for him. Today many of them must pretend to spit at him; all are powerless to help him!

WHAT WAS HIS "CRIME"? . . . He only believed that the people of the country for which he fought in the World War were entitled to freedom of speech, freedom of religious worship and freedom from racial persecution. If he had believed that angels have wings, it would have been just as dangerous for him!

HE NEVER DREAMED IT COULD HAPPEN to him! . . . He, too, felt "safe" and "secure" . . . Thousands upon thousands like him could have stopped it, and didn't. Now it's too late—for him, for many others. When you're systematically beaten and tortured and starved, and your mind is destroyed——!

WE'RE NOT ASKING FOR YOUR TEARS! . . . We're asking for your courage and self-help. Don't let it happen here—and to YOU! Alone, or indifferent, you're powerless to prevent it. But with 6,000 members backing you up in Hollywood, and with millions more joining the fight throughout the country, you CAN stop it!

DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT now—before it's too late! . . . Join the HOLLYWOOD ANTI-NAZI LEAGUE today for the defense of American Democracy! . . . You can become a member for $300 or $30 or $10—whichever your purse permits, whichever your love of life and liberty dictates . . . Send your check to us at 6513 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, Calif. Don't delay!

"THE LAST WARNING"

Chalk up a piece of good entertainment for the Crime Club series and note the fact that with good production and a well-picked cast this series makes itself look like a major.

THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER

Already firmly entrenched Crime Club fare parades in new and far more attractive attire. Surpassing . . . in both entertainment and production values, it will serve to boost the prestige of the series.

DAILY VARIETY

The best of the series to date.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Not only the best of the Crime Club productions to date, this, further, is as entertaining a concoction of mystery, laughs and thrills as has been turned out in Hollywood this season.

BOXOFFICE

Very enjoyable comedy mystery, rating as one of the best of Crime Club series.

FILM DAILY

It will be well received . . . everywhere . . . above average production . . . topnotch.

PICTURE REPORTS

These Crime Club pictures have maintained a rather consistent level of intelligent mystery and treatment and seem inclined to increasing liberality in the matter of production values. "Last Warning" will rate with the best . . .

NATIONAL BOX OFFICE DIGEST

An unusually good tongue-in-the-cheek mystery. Plenty of fun, lively action, A-1 performances, direction, sets, etc.

DIRECTORS

The Guiding Hands of the Bigger Hits

The Unsung Heroes Who Make or Break the Pictures

12 Make 29 of Year's 59 Big Hits

AS IN past years BOXOFFICE BAROMETER singles out the directors whose efforts brought forth the most successful pictures released within the year. Story, star, supporting players, sets and all else that may be termed "ingredients" that go into the making of a picture are plainly visible to the theatre audiences. But with the director it is a different case. He is the essential factor required to make all the other ingredients jell. He is unseen to theatre audiences but his work shows up quite visibly on the screen.

Each year there are some outstanding instances of big pictures taking boxoffice nosedives and of intended little pictures coming through with flying colors as patron magnets. While the director may or may not be blamed for the big picture flops, it is quite apparent the success attached to the unheralded "dark horses" very definitely is due to masterful direction. Since by the usual predeterminations (story and principal players) a picture is placed into "A" or "B" classification, it stands to reason that, when one of the smaller-budget group emerges into "A" performance at the boxoffice, it is the director who deserves the credit.

Most of the million-dollar spectacles fared quite well this past year but there was a large proportion of unsuspected pulling-power among the so-called program pictures. However there were fewer big hit pictures in 1938 than in 1937. The "Grosses" charts on preceding pages are the source of this tell-tale information. And the bases for this interesting compilation are the first-run reports appearing weekly in BOXOFFICE, covering from 5 to 27 runs in key cities of the United States.

Taking 100 per cent as average weekly intake and placing into the big hit class any picture that shows an average of 110 per cent among all its key city runs, the net result is 59 big hit pictures in 1938. To make the big hit league many pictures averaging 110 per cent scored as high as 150 per cent on individual performances. Some reached figures even beyond that, which is better than good.

Comparing records it is observed that in 1937 there were 101 big hit pictures, almost two to one against the 1938 score. Twelve directors, each making two or more hits, altogether made 29 in 1938 as compared with 23 directors making 55 in 1937.

The responsibility of directing a picture is a great one. To those men who make great pictures commendation is due. Those who made the hit pictures of 1938 contributed much to the progress of the industry during that year.

A special citation is due Joe Kane, who directed four Western productions each of which made the big hit class. (Incidentally while Kane directs the taking of many pictures he has never had one made of himself. So we regret that we were unable to reproduce a likeness of him alongside the other ace directors on the next page.)

Following we list the directors who made three hit films each:

FRANK BORZAGE: Mannequin (M-G-M), The Shining Hour (M-G-M), Three Comrades (M-G-M).

MICHAEL CURTIZ: The Adventures of Robin Hood (WB-FN), Angels With Dirty Faces (WB), Four Daughters (WB).

NORMAN TAUROG: The Adventures of Tom Sawyer (UA), Boys Town (M-G-M), Mad About Music (Univ).

The following directors are credited with two hit films each:

JACK CONWAY: Too Hot to Handle (M-G-M), A Yank at Oxford (M-G-M).

ALLAN DWAN: Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm (20th-Fox), Suez (20th-Fox).

W. S. VAN DYKE, II: Marie Antoinette (M-G-M), Rosalie (M-G-M).

JOHN FORD: The Hurricane (UA), Submarine Patrol (20th-Fox).

HENRY KING: Alexander's Ragtime Band (20th-Fox), In Old Chicago (20th-Fox).

GEORGE SEITZ: Love Finds Andy Hardy (M-G-M), Out West With the Hardys (M-G-M).

WM. KEIGHLEY: Adventures of Robin Hood (WB-FN), Brother Rat (WB-FN).

The following directors are credited with one hit film each:

LOYD BACON: Submarine D-1 (WB-FN).

BUSBY BERKELEY: Hollywood Hotel (WB-FN).

FRANK CAPRA: You Can't Take It With You (Col).

AL CHRISTIE: Birth of a Baby (GN), JOHN CROMWELL: Algiers (UA).

The Producers of 1938's Hit Films

THE men behind the men who direct the hit pictures are the producers, whose job it is to co-ordinate, from story selection through the finishing stage, the production of each picture in their charge. More and more these men are becoming known to the public as pictures made under their aegis emerge as hallmarks of quality entertainment.

The producer must keep a very accurate finger on the public pulse. That he does this is evident from the fact that stories purchased months in advance of their making are often given adaptations that fit them in with current events as well as entertainment trends. In other words the producer must be a showman and one of his tasks is the determination of what constitutes showmanship qualities that are of value to a picture in its being sold to, as well in entertaining, the public.

Again using the "Grosses" charts as the key to the hit pictures of 1938, we cite the producers who are responsible for these hits. In so doing associate producers, who had active charge of production, have been grouped with producers.

Pictures covered are those whose average during 1938 was 110 per cent or better at first run theatres in 27 key cities of the United States as reported weekly in Boxoffice. On three of these productions, "Love Finds Andy Hardy," "Out West With the Hardys," and "The Great Waltz," all made by M-G-M, the studio gives no individual producer credit.

Following are listed the hit-making producers and their pictures, alphabetically according to the number they delivered:

Viewing the Course of the Industry by Guide Posts Along the Way

Stronger Themes in New Film Fare

THEY are going topical these days in Hollywood; topical and historical, and the red meat of controversy likely will find its way into a considerable portion of the 1939 film fare.

This probably will be the most notable cinematic achievement of the new year, even if not the most voluminous. Warned by recurrent rumblings of dissatisfaction with many of 1938's "harmless" dishes of entertainment, in some instances denuded of punch by touchy foreign markets and in others by the cries of domestic minorities, producers indicate in advance schedules they will dip freely into the stream of current life and of history for new inspiration.

Almost every studio has penciled in several productions gleaned from the headlines and the American historical field. In the former, the trend is toward internationalism with political intrigue and the gigantic game of "give and take" for minor European nations as interesting fodder. In the latter, the studio eye delves into the archives of our country's history for glorious chapters to breathe their power and drama upon our screen. What America is, means, and how it got that way is the general point here. Nor is the trade overlooking the nation's general wooing of South America. Several films will feature national heroes of our Latin neighbors.

Springboarding from the wave of popularity greeting reissues of old-time thrillers, there will be a large number of mystery and chiller productions. Action will be the keynote, with several studios aiming at new highs in marrow-freezing product. International spies, sabotage, gun-running and super-crook melodramas will supply the "little brother" mate to this thrill combination. The popular detective series will continue unabated, with at least one addition to the ranks.

Musicals, which last year carried their 1937 momentum into even higher favor, are being eclipsed by the more robust fare. They will continue, but far below their 1938 zenith. A stab will be made at opera as a corollary to the musical comedy and tune spectacle type of presentation. In the main, however, swing will rule the clef zone, with name bands to lure the coin of the jittersbugs.

A sharp increase is indicated for the "series" films, those steadily growing little features that catapulted into public esteem the past year. Slipping in under the wire as average features, several of them outdrew the supers in '38 and bid well into numerical importance for the current year.

Comedy will be more humor than comedy, with the wacky screwballism going almost entirely off the boards in favor of more subtle shadings. The play will center more on personalities of recognized drawing power doing the things they grew popular doing in other fields, with the chances heavy for the development of several new names to boxoffice importance. A few horse-play and belly-laugh experts will continue to cavort for that substantial segment of the public they claim so strongly, but it is indicated that funny stuff must have more fun than rowdiness.

The historical western will lead in importance, if not in number, in this bracket. Sagas of the wide open spaces and the empire-building days are budgeted at high figures that indicate careful attention to production values and mounting. The rest of the "horse operas" will ride without loss of speed or number. Lumber camp rules prevail, with no holds barred, and the scare brush epics will encompass the annual quota of cowboy songsters, rustlers and fair maidens.

Juvenile films indicate no letup in quantity, with the established favorites, plus a few new faces, upholding the usual load.

There probably will be fewer "super colossals" in any category, the signs indicating a more even distribution of production funds over a wider range of product. High-cost efforts will come forth, but not in such abundance, nor resulting from so much time in the making. Generally, and due largely to diminished returns, the keynote is economy achieved by more careful selection of story and less attempt to dress up a weak framework.

In the field of the short subject the patriotic and historical themes will be outstanding. Tense little dramas of the making of America and of the figures who contributed most to that building process will travel hand in hand with purely inspirational subjects designed to create a deeper appreciation for this country's standards and values. Color in the rest of the product will be used more abundantly, with travelogues and scientific and fashion reels highlighting. A couple of new cartoon series will be born, and the creators of the animateds will toy further with the feature-length idea. Crime and thrill series will continue their popularity, and comedy will go along with musical and novelty subjects. Perhaps fewer in number than in 1938, the "little features" are likely to loom larger in diversity.

New FACES Will Rise *By Harlan Thompson

THERE will be a new screen generation in 1939.

More new faces will rise during the coming year than at any time since the advent of sound turned Hollywood upside down.

The rise of the new generation is inevitable and it is a healthy thing for the screen.

Few people, outside of those actually producing pictures, realize the enormous depletion in the ranks of major players in Hollywood during the past three years. There always is a number of players, stars and featured, retiring for various causes each year.

Some of the stars wish to quit while at the height of their popularity, others retire for purely personal reasons ranging from finance to babies.

For some time now the replacement of these players has not kept pace with the "mortality" rate. During the last few months, the situation became acute. Producers actually had to stand in line to await their turn for players. There literally were not enough players in Hollywood to cast the normal production schedule.

More and more, the producers have gone out and discovered talent through sheer necessity. Big roles have been placed in the hands of players whose screen capability had not been definitely established. It is to the credit of those players that remarkably few of them failed in their assignments.

For example, Ellen Drew was a little contract player at Paramount. She was doing extra work as part of her training. Then Wesley Ruggles started casting "Sing, You Sinners," with Bing Crosby and Fred MacMurray. A suitable leading lady was not available. So Ruggles reached into the extra ranks and selected Miss Drew. Thereafter, she immediately went into "If I Were King" opposite Ronald Colman; is now busy in "The Lady's From Kentucky" opposite George Raft; and will be cast in "The World's Applause," opposite Raft and Akim Tamiroff.

Last year, I took a young comedian from the New York stage of whom few filmgoers ever had heard. The comedian was Bob Hope, who, with Shirley Ross, made "Thanks for the Memory." Hope has been going since. He and Bing Crosby will be teamed in "Follow the Sun."

Another man who, Hollywood believes, will be heard from during the year is Robert Preston. He was found in a community playhouse in Pasadena. Three minor pictures shot him up and attracted him to Cecil B. DeMille who has cast him in a role, second only to that of Joel McCrea, in "Union Pacific."

Harold Hurley, another Paramount producer, took a young unknown from the New York stage and cast her in "Persons in Hiding." Now, the studio has decided that she is starring material. Her name is Patricia Morison and you'll be seeing her often in 1939.

In the realm of the glamour girls, the names that will rise and shine are Isa Miranda, Hedy Lamarr, Miliza Korjus and Danielle Darrieux.

These are only a few of the new generation.

Other names which should be mentioned are Nancy Kelly, Priscilla Lane, Judith Barrett, Jean Rogers, Luana Walters and Donald O'Connor.

The O'Connor boy is another case. He was taken from vaudeville by Ruggles and cast with Crosby and MacMurray in "Sing, You Sinners." The boy clicked and is slated for buildup during the coming year.

It's going to be a great year of opportunity for the unknowns as Hollywood replaces its talent reservoir.

Can Motion Pictures Be the BEST ENTERTAINMENT?

By Joe Pasternak*

NEVER in the history of the world has there been such a need for entertainment. In the Hamlet of Shakespeare's day, the Bard said, "Ah, the times are out of joint!" Now, nearly five hundred years later, that cry is just as true as it was then, perhaps even truer than it was then. The times are indeed out of joint.

Where shall a harassed, troubled and even frightened humanity find surcease from the ever-increasing complications of living? Where shall it look for that reassurance that there is still left some charm, beauty, gaiety and understanding in the world. The answer is—in entertainment. In entertainment which, though it may be make-believe, is a sort of believable make-believe—the kind which the most intelligent people can take to their hearts with the feeling that it may some day come true. And motion pictures can and should give the world that kind of entertainment.

American audiences who, more than any other people, have made motion pictures a part of their lives, are the most appreciative, the most courteous and the most sympathetic audiences in the world. Supply them with what they want and what they need and their response is tremendous.

And what they want right now is escape, if only for a little while, from life's compulsions. If motion picture producers wisely provide that escape, they will have placed their industry in the ranks with public benefactors, thereby gaining dignity and scope. Not only will they gain in spiritual size, but materially the rewards will grow and grow.

Motion pictures are a power for shaping opinion, inducing moods, even creating tastes and opinions. This fact is too well known to elaborate. But what motion picture producers may not realize is that now, in this day and age, they have the greatest privilege ever offered man—that of alleviating, even if only in part, a measure of the ills which nearly every thinking person alive today is subject to.

I have long been of the opinion that music is a medicine for a sick world. Producers have not as yet taken advantage of this tremendous healing power, its force for good, for disseminating the happiness that lies in listening to great music. A glorious voice singing the great musical compositions of a genius gives one the necessary courage to meet and solve the problems of life. Why do we not take advantage of it?

American motion pictures can also be made goodwill ambassadors as well as entertainment factors. The right American pictures can correct the host of misunderstandings and wrong notions about America and its people which have sprung up in all parts of the world.

Traveling in Europe I was astonished to find that many otherwise intelligent people are under the impression that the only music America is familiar with is jazz, jitter and swing. To them Chicago was synonymous with gangsters and shooting. They knew nothing about the magnificent Chicago Symphony Orchestra which plays the music of the greatest European composers to huge audiences of thousands and thousands of people, who listen with rapt attention. That the finest opera in the world is heard every year in New York, if they know it at all, was not nearly so indicative of the kind of people who lived there as was the fact that it was a city of strikes and violence.

We in the motion picture field can correct all these distortions of what America and its people really stand for. But we must apply ourselves to the making of motion pictures with the same thought, care and foresight which our government uses in selecting an ambassador to represent us in foreign diplomatic circles. Not until we meet every qualification of birth, education, personal fitness for the office, efficiency and experience is such an important emissary chosen. American producers should not do less with their product. They are just as important in their representation to the world abroad of our country and our people.

The opportunity to bring into the world the loving kindness, sympathy and understanding which it so sorely needs today is a God-given one to the motion picture industry. These qualities can be woven in with picture entertainment, and by that fact the screen will have a three-fold value: Such pictures will really entertain; they will be doing good while entertaining, and because people open their pursestrings to really good entertainment, the industry will be the gainer in larger and happier motion picture audiences.

Yes, motion pictures can be the best entertainment.

It Takes THRILLS to Turn the Turnstiles

By Victor Fleming*

ALL other arguments to the contrary, there can be no denying that pictures packed with thrills have kept the turnstiles spinning more consistently than any other type of pictures.

It is true that we have had many cycles of successful pictures. There have been the mystery cycles, the gangster cycles, the G-Man cycles and enough other cycles to fit a cantipede completely with roller skates. But cycles are short-lived. They come and go with as much regularity as the income tax collector.

Thrill pictures, however, were with us at the very beginning of the industry. They remained with us through the ever-changing eras, through silence and sound. They are still with us and will continue to be with us because they ring more bull's-eyes at the turnstiles than any other brand of cinematic entertainment.

Back in the days of the first motion pictures, thrill pictures, although tolerated as a passing novelty at first, maintained popularity the longest. As they gained a foothold in the public's favor, there came into being such thrill stars as Pearl White, Helen Holmes, and several others who specialized in dealing out chills and shudders and even frightful shrieks.

With Pearl White still in mind, it is a strange coincidence that she, the first of the thrill stars, and Warner Oland, who played the villain in her "Perils of Pauline," of a quarter century ago, should both die during the production of another and modern thrill picture, "Too Hot to Handle."

Even aside from the serials, those pictures of the distant past that are still more clearly remembered today are the thrill pictures. "The Birth of a Nation" certainly was a thrill picture, the first of the thrill classics, with its breathless battle scenes and class intolerance. Another was also Griffith's "Intolerance," which was a panorama of spectacle thrills.

"Ben Hur" was a thrill picture. So were "The Big Parade," "Captain Blood," "Down to the Sea in Ships," "Wings," "Hell's Angels" and scores of others which, aside from being as fresh in the memory of today as they were in the yesterdays, rang up record-breaking boxoffice receipts.

Even in the later days, the thrill pictures have held their own as boxoffice champions. We have had "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "Captains Courageous," "Hell Divers," "Test Pilot" and "Men With Wings," which offer keen competition for the drawing room type of productions, even though these milder themes may run into the seven-figure production costs.

We have had many outstanding star teams, such as John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Rudolph Valentino and Nita Naldi, Gloria Swanson and Thomas Meighan, Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely, Douglas McLean and Doris May, but none could be rightly called thrill star teams.

We have popular star teams of today—Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, William Powell and Myrna Loy—but they are teams in an entirely different field. While these continue as important boxoffice teams, conditions of the day have created a place for a new co-starring field. That field is for the thrill star teams.

So far, the thrill star team field is limited. Perhaps it will increase. My dough for turnstile music must ride with them.

Exhibitors Must HELP Sell the Public

By Frank Lloyd*

NOW is the time for all good exhibitors to come to the aid of the industry, by:

(1) Tempering the tendency to depend too much upon star power alone for boxoffice returns.

(2) Not waiting for Hollywood to pre-sell their bookings to the public.

As a producer, I read many stories that very well could be made into fine pictures. But their production costs would be so high, due to the demand of exhibitors that the leading roles must be played by boxoffice names, that it becomes necessary to abandon them as screen material.

Although I am a firm believer in the policy of heading picture casts with good star names, I still maintain there are numerous subjects waiting to be put upon the screen, at a reasonable cost, if the exhibitors will help sell them to the public.

We all know that great boxoffice pictures have been made without star names. There actually is no reason why they cannot be made more often, with subjects of sufficient strength to impress producer and exhibitor alike that "The play's the thing."

This can be brought about more readily if the exhibitor does not wait for Hollywood to sell the picture for him. I would like to see every exhibitor, convinced that he has been given a good picture, go to the bat locally and sell it, on its merit and with adequate regard for all of its entertainment values, to his patrons.

How many times do we read reports from exhibitors saying:

"I personally feel that this is a fine picture. But, it didn't do business."

Perhaps he failed to back up his personal opinion with a good selling campaign on the picture locally, following up on the studio's national campaign.

The exhibitor must learn, and learn fast, that there are only so many boxoffice names. And that there must be a special type of picture made from now on, without star casting and yet without fear of cost, if we are going to keep the theatres supplied with fresh material and not face the regrettable situation which existed last year when double bills were filled out with return engagements of old pictures which stifled the boxoffice.

Along with the production of star pictures, I see no ~~lesser~~ way we may not successfully develop a special field for what may be termed exploitation pictures if the exhibitors will back up the studios and go out into the highways and byways and sell them.

The exhibitor today is in a spot where his business runs along close to an established norm week after week, yet the price he has to pay for pictures fluctuate sharply according to their star power. The producer, in having to pay top salaries for star names naturally has to place a higher price on his product.

Hollywood today is giving the exhibitor many pictures which offer other things than big name draw. Yet many of the essential values to be found in these pictures too often are not well sold to the fan.

In other words I feel that many exhibitors have relied too much on the publicity and exploitation departments of the producer. They must look more closely to their own territory of worthwhile features for a local concentration of the national selling campaign.

Business Is on the UPSWING

By Henry Ginsberg*

GREATER prosperity ahead! All signs point to it. All experts agree on it. General business is on the upswing, and that is the most heartening news that could possibly come to Hollywood's ears. When the factories are humming, when the cars are rolling off the assembly lines; when Mr. America is getting an adequate salary check every week, then there are boom times for motion pictures.

It seems safe to predict that, barring unforeseen developments, box-office business in general should be better by at least 20 per cent during the next six months. It is most probable that for the entire year of 1939 the final figures will disclose a substantial gain over 1938.

These conclusions are not based on charts and graphs of the film market itself. They come instead from a study of general business conditions. We know from this study that the past year has seen a definite upturn in industrial production volume, that increased employment is in prospect as is a rising national income. There are hopes that the problem of the railroads and public utilities soon will be solved.

This may seem to wander far afield from the primary problem with which motion picture companies are concerned, which is, namely, to provide entertainment. But when we realize that the entertainment is made possible only by the dimes and quarters of working men and women, depending for their living upon this modern business world, we can see that an upturn in any line, from potato growing to sardine canning, directly affects Hollywood.

In several ways, motion pictures are at the complete mercy of the economic cycle. Manufacturers of staple products, in dull times, can either close down or store their goods until a healthier market arrives. Even in agriculture, certain growers band together to pro rate their product and achieve a measure of control over the market.

But in Hollywood, whether times are good or bad, the rivers of celluloid must continue to flow. The public must be served, at all times, with the best possible entertainment. Hollywood may take just pride in its record during depression years, for having kept faith with the public in producing increasingly better motion pictures.

You can't take a picture and store it for a more propitious release. The very styles worn by the stars place as definite a dating stamp on almost all films as the bonding houses place on bottles of spirits. You can only continue to make pictures, no matter what business conditions may be, and sell them as vigorously as you know how with all the showmanship at your command.

Selznick International, under the leadership of David O. Selznick, expects to keep pace with the general upturn with the most ambitious production program in its history. Every production on the year's program is marked for the same careful, thorough treatment and high quality for which Selznick has always been known.

There is every reason to believe they will go out to the healthiest film market in years.

*Vice-President and General Manager of Selznick International Pictures, Inc.

Hollywood's HAPPY DAYS Are Now

By George B. Seitz*

OLDSTERS in Hollywood often recall the happy days of blood and thunder serials, wild Western rides, and the first imposing spectacles such as "Intolerance," and recite the glories of the years that were, when men were men and pictures were usually written on the cuff.

But not I, although I am called the father of the old-time serials. It was I who guided Pearl White through her amazing adventures and wrote the scripts of "Exploits of Elaine" and others of her thrill-crammed plays. It was fun, but today I take no pride in parenthood of the lurid stories which were my "open sesame" to a screen career.

My pride is that today I am the director of the Judge Hardy Family. These Hardy Family pictures are important in the industry, aside from any boxoffice value, because they prove the fallacies of our cherished beliefs of years. They prove that you don't need spectacle, but only human nature and the truth, to create a good picture. They prove that it's not necessary to work up a pitch of excitement to make a box-office success. In short, they prove something we forgot in early stages of picture-making and have never quite remembered since; that holding a mirror to nature is the highest type of art.

The fact that other series are being attempted as a result, I regard as indicative of a realization by producers in general that truth and human nature are the best boxoffice.

As a matter of fact, a Hardy story is more work than any thriller or spectacle. To keep the stories human and natural, every word spoken must be weighed and gauged. Our yardstick for every scene or every line is "Did it ever happen in real life?" We use no gags or planted comedy lines. Only the natural questions children ask, and the natural situations that arise in every man's family, get into the stories. We can't make up a situation to fit a spot, solve a story problem or provide an ending.

In the lusty days when I started in pictures the directors often wrote their own stories. Usually they were made up as the picture went along. We'd get a character into a predicament, then sit around and figure how to get him out, never bothering about motivation, the character's natural reaction, or anything like that. In serials, we had a formula. We called it "hunt the weenie." The "weenie" could be a railroad, building of a bridge, search for a missing deed. Hero and heroine get out to find or recapture it. The "heavy" plotted to block them. In each episode we'd get them into a scrape, bring them to a point where they face destruction, then insert the title "continued next week." The next episode would get them out of their predicament by hook or crook in the first 50 feet, then we'd get them into another.

Having my own family is a great help in the Hardy series. Many little incidents come from family circles. The line Mickey Rooney speaks, "Kids don't hate older people because they punish 'em, or they'd hate their own fathers and mothers," was originally spoken by Carey Wilson, after his stern Quaker father had given him a sound whipping. "Dad, I want to kiss every pretty girl. Do you think I'm normal?" is another of Mickey's lines that came from the young son of one of the producers at the studio.

That's how we get our lines, right out of actual families. And we get our situations that way, too. Every day people in the studio and fans outside send us hundreds of suggestions. Some are gags or jokes, which might be fine in any other picture. But we can't use them. We get about one good idea out of every 100 suggestions.

That's why these pictures are harder to make than our old thrillers. But when we see the reaction of hundreds of American families we feel that the time was well spent. Incidentally the family, as a group, is the star. No single person dominates. And as long as we can keep the pictures that way, I suppose we can go on making them as long as human nature lasts.

*Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Director.

What a Cartoonist THINKS About

By Walter Lantz*

PEOPLE often ask me what a cartoon producer thinks about.

It's a fair question, but most of the time I find myself at a loss for the answer. Because, by and large, a cartoon producer thinks all cockeyed. Making animated cartoons is a cockeyed business and I've maintained for the 20 years I've been in it that producers in this branch of the business are nuts.

They have to be to make cartoons.

But, aside from that fact, it is true that we all must try to think whether it's crazy or not about the product and what the public will like. Trying to guess the public's taste as far as cartoons are concerned is just as difficult, in fact, more so in many instances, than it is for the producer of flesh pictures.

We have our stock in trade—fantasy. Fantasy has universal appeal and solves a lot of problems for the animators. It's the pattern for animators and the one thing the flesh pictures have not been able to take away from us in the few attempts they have made into that field. But fantasy is not enough for us, we have to have more outlets for our bugs and animals. And even though most of our characters are of the bug and animal kingdom I believe they can be adapted to most any given situation.

For that reason, I try to keep up with current events for possible cartoon features. It's just as easy to put a lady bug into the humorous side of something current as it is to keep her in the nursery rhymes.

By that, I do not mean the lady bug could be the heroine of one of the front page murders which is apt to be on the marquee of every theatre if it has boxoffice "umph." But on the other hand, why couldn't she? Especially if there was something humorous for the lady bug to do to justify a cartoon, because she must get laughs whether it's a murder or swinging on a gate.

We have just finished a cartoon with our lady bug playing one of the leads in a story that is the craze of the day—jitterbugs. The fact that it is current has led the flesh producers to make several pictures on this subject. National magazines have devoted pages of space to this crazy subject recently and it has become news. So, why not capitalize on it the same as Darryl Zanuck or Warners have done so many times in the past with a current hot in-the-news material?

We do not show an electric chair or many of the accoutrements of all the modern gangster films, but we have devised another subject, an up-to-the-minute gang short with our cast of mice. They do everything the Cagneys and O'Briens are doing only for laughs.

Recently we released a cartoon which was shown during the time the famous Hollywood amphitheatre was receiving national recognition during the summer concerts. People seemed to like it because of its freshness. They were reading about the bowl and hearing about it over their radios.

So with those, and many other examples, I think that, if the cartoon producer thinks, he should reach for the papers and the radio more often and then start to think about how he can gag the news to fit the bugs.

 I hear it's doing pretty well.*

Dr. Tibbitt cures Zenobia and she falls in love with him—causing plenty of trouble when she breaks into an elaborate dinner party given by Mrs. Carter (Alice Brady), who is doing everything possible to break up the engagement of her son to Tibbitt's daughter. After many comic entanglements with Zenobia and Tibbitt, Mrs. Carter finally renounces, realizing the Tibbitt family, if not long on background, is fine and human.

King of the Turf

Jim Mason (Adolphe Menjou), once a successful race-truck man, is broke when he meets Goldie (Roger Danley), a stable boy. Goldie has faith in Jim and together they decide to purchase a temperamental race horse sold at auction. With Goldie as jockey they keep winning every race until they're the despair of Bookie Grimes (Alan Dinehart) who attempts to dope the horse. Mason learns that Goldie is really the son of Mrs. Barnes (Dolores Costello), his former wife, and that Goldie has run away. Jim sends Goldie home; Goldie runs away again. Mason tries to disgrace himself by letting his horse run a crooked race. Goldie races the animal to victory, however, so Mason slaps the boy, which completely finishes the job of disillusioning him and he leaves Jim, who finds himself once more alone and broke.

Son of Frankenstein

Cast: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill, Josephine Hutchinson, Edgar Norton. Producer: Burt Kelly. Director: Rowland V. Lee. Original Screenplay: Willis Cooper.

Wolf von Frankenstein (Basil Rathbone) becomes imbued with the fervent desire to clear the name of his father—reviled as the creator of the destructive monster (Boris Karloff). The local police chief, Krogh (Lionel Atwill) warns him the villagers believe he is launching mad and menacing experiments based on an alarming number of murders and atrocities. Frankenstein meets Ygor (Bela Lugosi), a crazy shepherd, who leads him to a crypt where the monster, in a coma, is lying. Frankenstein embarks on experiments which he hopes will inject a soul into the creature; finding, in the process, that Ygor is the only person with any control over it. The monster goes on a rampage, attacks Frankenstein's small child and is killed by the scientist—who thus removes the family curse.

Swing, Sister, Swing

Cast: Ken Murray, Johnny Downs, Kathryn Kane, Eddie Quillan, Ernest Truex, Ted Veehna and Orchestra. Producer: Burt Kelly. Director: Joseph Satterly. Original: Burt Kelly. Screenplay: Charles Grayson.

Yor's sister (Kay Murray), high-powered press agent, brings Johnny (Johnny Downs) to New York with Professor Orlando Beebe (Ernest Truex), Snookie (Kathryn Kane) and Satch-Lips (Eddie Quillan), a hot trumpet player, to present their newly-devised dance, the "Baltimore Bubble." It is an immediate success and Prof. Beebe's little dancing school in Greenvale coins money for a few weeks. But soon the craze wears off and Satch-Lips, Snookie and the professor head home. Johnny, however, has become swell-headed, and remains in New York until, convinced he is bucking a tough racket, he heads home—where he finds Snookie and Lips have built him a new gas station.

Prevalent Patterns for Future Planning

Scattered throughout the following pages will be found a variety of project illustrations selected from the structural records of 1938—another year of marked achievement in theatre planning for greater House Appeal through architectural finesse and modern efficiency.

These views of various departments of our contemporary modern cinemas may well be accepted as patterns toward the modern functional design for movie entertainment to meet a public demand. In the text, too, we have endeavored to emphasize by case reports and good reasoning the rising importance of physical properties to the restoration of income from theatre operations.

And last, but by no means of less importance we present herein "The Key to Better Buving," an itemization of materials, equipment and supplies—sources of service available in the modernization and maintenance of all theatre properties.

This department of BOXOFFICE BAROMETER for 1939, as well as the regular editions of The Modern Theatre section to follow at monthly intervals throughout the year, is again rededicated to the establishment of a higher standard of practice in theatre planning and equipment provision.

To our readers; to our sponsors, the advertisers, many of whom are identified herein; to all who are collaborating with us in our campaign for theatre modernization, we give thanks sincerely.

Outstanding THEATRE PROJECTS of 1938

ALTHOUGH generally alluded to as an off-year for new theatre construction and property improvement, 1938 was far from being a bad year for theatre building. True, the structural activities were not as widespread perhaps as in the previous year (1937), but the difference in volume of projects is more than compensated for in the quality of construction and high standard of planning technique which is evident in the building and remodeling records of 1938.

Most theatre projects of the year just passed are characterized by a more careful degree of architectural planning than has been the case in preceding periods. From the large capacity houses in metropolitan locations right down to the little movie theatres in small towns and more sparsely located communities that were newly erected or renovated last year, there is noticeable evidence on every hand that theatre owners have grasped the House Appeal idea and are using it effectively.

A few of the many noteworthy examples of good form in theatre planning and outfitting are illustrated, each is indicative of the trend toward property improvement which now pervades the field.

FACIAL IMPROVEMENTS

Reviewing the progress of new construction and property improvement during the past twelve months, one is impressed with a marked betterment in the design of new theatre fronts. With but few exceptions, theatre owners have availed themselves fully of the functional effects of outdoor advertising in the arrangement of their fronts. On every hand a more finished job is apparent in the design and construction of theatre front entrances.

Modern moving picture theatres, and particularly those of 1938, are setting the pace for all classes of business in the matter of point-of-sale business promotion. The influence of this 1938 crop of new and renewed theatres is spreading noticeably to other lines of business that derive their patronage by appeal to the watchful eye of the passerby.

In a majority of cases our current theatre projects are characterized by colorful, iridescent facades that form a perfect setting for effective program exploitation. With modern streamlined designs, adequately complemented by correct lighting formulae, these new fronts are further enforced by main signs that act as inviting beacons, casting their rays abroad and in all directions for many blocks. A nearer approach to the well-illuminated areas brings the attention of motorists

The modernized Times Theatre, at Bradstock, Pennsylvania, redesigned by Samuel Rappaport, architect, sets an effective style for the facial treatment of small theatres. Structural glass was the medium.

Chicago's Cine Theatre, erected in 1938, typifies the trend toward betterment in outdoor display technique. Rapp & Rapp, of Chicago, designed it.

and pedestrians to highly visible marquee attraction boards that tell the prospective patrons what they want to know about what is going on within.

In the projects of 1938 we find ample evidence of the trend toward better merchandising among theatre men. The old, cluttered up, poorly lighted, paper-pasted and cheap banner infested theatre front is definitely a thing of the past. Theatre portals today are vastly more inviting than ever before, because in their design the real function of a theatre's front—to attract and impress and draw patronage—is not being overlooked.

Outwardly, the 1938 crop of new theatres, thanks to advanced architectural technique and modern materials, shows that theatre men are rapidly regaining their appreciation of real values in theatre property investment. More careful planning than has been applied in the past is apparent in the functional design and outfitting of many fine theatre fronts during the year.

PRESTIGE ENHANCED

To say that the public has not been impressed immensely by the structural activities of the theatre operating industry during the past year would be a deliberate misrepresentation of fact. This is definitely proved by boxoffice records in new theatres as well as in old theatres where improvements have been made. Such reports indicate that community interest in theatre-going is being renewed and that business, with but few excep-

FRONTISPIECE

Chicago's Esquire, perhaps the outstanding new theatre project of the year just past, is markedly typical of the trend to functionalism in theatre planning for the maximum in house appeal and operating efficiency. Outstanding, because it affords a most interesting study of what may be accomplished through correctness in design for a given community plus the application of modern materials. tions, has been sustained despite a run of admittedly weak pictures during the fore part of the year. And significantly, in the case of most modern theatres, receipts have been sustained without resort to cash give-aways, prevalent forms of premium promotion and multi-feature programs that have soured many a movie-goer.

The really modern theatre stands pretty well on its own in the attraction of patronage, and it has been found that by the provision of comfort and convenience under an atmosphere of refinement patrons as a whole are less critical of what is available in the way of entertainment.

Progress in physical properties, however, has not been confined to theatre exteriors by any means. The same degree of functional planning and good judgment in furnishing is to be found inside these outstanding theatre projects of the year. To enumerate in detail the many refinements incorporated throughout these modern theatres would consume much more space than has been allotted to this review.

Lobbies for the most part are more spacious or at least are made to appear so by astute planning. They are correctly lighted and arranged for the utmost convenience of traffic. Everything is more accessible and inviting to patrons as they pass from the ticket window into the inner reaches of the theatre.

In these more functional foyers, lobbies and vestibules, effectively designed for the handling of patronage, theatre planners have accomplished much that deserves commendation. Their work shows cognizance of the fact that theatre lobbies, or foyers, as one may choose to call them, have a much more important function to perform than merely serving as a passageway to the auditorium.

COMFORT IS PRONOUNCED

In fact, in the more recently erected or remodeled houses, the auxiliary rooms, such as lobbies, lounges, foyers, rest rooms and other convenience and comfort provisions, have been given more constructive attention than ever before. It is quite obvious, therefore, that theatre ownership and management is rapidly coming around to the conclusion that practical House Appeal is important in every department of the theatre with which the patron may come into contact.

Thus, our modern foyers, while less flashy, than formerly, are many times more functional in their decorative effects and serviceable appointments for the convenience of the public. Advertising display in this department of the modern theatres is being reduced to an exact science through the medium of attractive, unobtrusive display frames and efficient lighting. Carpeted floors for this area have become a custom and colorful rubber mattings are also popular. Efficiency abounds in the waiting rooms of our modern theatres.

Rest rooms are larger, more commodious and arranged and outfitted for the utmost in convenience and sanitation. Ill-smelling toilet rooms hidden away in inaccessible locations are no longer tolerated. In the modern theatres of this period, the theatre toilet is no longer the subject of public derision. The modern toilet room is definitely mentionable. Plumbing fix-

The Silver Theatre, in Silver Spring, Maryland, offers a clean, airy atmosphere of planning for community appeal. It was designed by John L. Thompson, veteran theatre architect.

A gracefully designed facade and the unconventional streamlined run-up with A-shaped entrance board make the Delman Theatre, in Tulsa, Okla., a neighborhood attraction.

Eye-catching attraction for suburban theatre entrance is illustrated strikingly in the Circle Theatre, of Dearborn, Mich. Its architects, Bennett & Strauch, provided both artistry and efficiency.

An architectural drawing of the New Cataract Theatre by Eugene De Rosa, architect, which was completed during 1938 in Niagara Falls, New York.

tures and appointments of these rooms are now of the very best.

The auditoria of our new theatre projects are perhaps characterized more by comfort than any other single factor. The gingerbread atmosphere of former periods has almost entirely disappeared. In its stead is simple roominess in which attention is focused by cleverly decorating technique onto the screen. Nothing is allowed to detract from the interest of the picture, yet the decorative scheme is far from lacking in artistic beauty. It is a simple beauty that does not betray the screen. Colorful yet not clashing. Correct lighting, properly controlled, contributes a sense of relaxation to the audience.

SEATING SERVICE FEATURED

The comfortable seating of our new theatres, even to the smallest of them, is one of the outstanding features of the plan for entertainment expressed in almost every modernizing project. Correctness of body posture is expressed in most every seating installation made during 1938. It is no longer uncommon to find ten- or twelve-dollar theatre seats in some of our small and remotely located theatres.

The theatre auditorium generally, as expressed in architecture, decorative effect and outfitting during the past twelve months, shows a high regard for human comfort and convenience. Improved acoustics combined with restful decorations and lighting that is kind to the eyes are pronounced features of a majority of theatre projects completed during 1938. Improvements in projection and sound reproduction have lagged a bit during the latter portion of the year, but in the main progress has been shown in the general operating efficiency of all theatres.

Elegance in neighborhood theatre planning, a trend of 1938, is represented in the San Marco Theatre, in the San Marco residential section of Jacksonville, Fla. Its design was by Roy A. Benjamin, architect.

Most new theatres erected last year were equipped with more efficient air conditioning systems than has been the practice heretofore. All-season air conditioning shows promise of supplanting the idea of mere summer cooling in the minds of theatre management. Several of the new theatres were completely air conditioned and not a few of the remodeling jobs embraced major improvements in air conditioning for year 'round operation.

Thus the new and renewed theatres of 38 are characterized collectively for their sensible planning in most all particulars. In no previous period has there appeared greater regard for practicability in theatre designing and in the selection of modern materials, functional furnishing and efficient mechanical equipment. Most of our 1938 new theatres are excellent examples of the type of institution needed to revive interest in movie-going.

POINTS OF IMPROVEMENT

Recapitulating the features that make projects outstanding, one may ascribe to the current crop of theatre improvement the following points, viewing the examples from front to rear: 1) Marked improvement in theatre facades, with especial reference to better facilities for electrical advertising display; 2) improved lobbies and vestibules, arranged for greater convenience and less confusion in handling of crowds; better equipped and more sensibly decorated; 3) larger and more sanitary toilet rooms, equipped with modern conveniences; 4) noticeable effects for comfort in the auditorium, with marked improvement in seating, lighting and air conditioning facilities; 5) more extensive use of modern materials throughout, including many of the latest building material development of the era; 6) better structural provision for picture presentation and a wider acceptance of mechanical improvements for both sight and sound.

An industry-wide awakening of interest in the physical properties of good showmanship is definitely shown by the construction records of 1938. In spite of seasonal trials and tribulations with which the exhibition branch of the industry was beset throughout the year, it continued steadily on its course in the direction of property modernization. In this respect what was accomplished during 1938 will be good for business in 1939.

Territorial Reports on PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT

Conservative estimates from various film exchange centers place the past year's appropriations for new theatre construction and property modernization at about $39,000,000.

A SIX-MONTHS' recess in theatre construction and remodeling which first became noticeable in July of 1938 served to reduce the total expenditure for property improvements and place it considerably below the record of 1937.

A survey made by field representatives of the Boxoffice staff indicates a spottiness of structural activity throughout the industry, yet discloses no serious decrease in the trend toward property improvement in the key centers of the United States and Canada. Prospects of an early resumption of theatre building and remodeling activity are indicated by the survey, which is not quite complete as we go to press. No figures are available outside the key centers referred to above.

Reports from 23 key centers indicate that upwards of $39,000,000 were spent for new theatre construction, remodeling and general modernization during 1938. This is well in line, considering the six-months' recession referred to, with the previous year's record.

The following reports serve well as an indication of structural activity during the year past. While largely estimative, they are intended to be on the conservative side:

Atlanta—Approximately $1,072,000 was spent in this trade territory for 22 new theatres during 1938, according to best estimates. Additionally, nearly $400,000 was expended in remodeling and renovation activity.

Boston—Ten new theatres were erected in this exchange area during 1938 at a cost of some $600,000. About a hundred houses were remodeled and re-equipped at a round figure estimate of $500,000.

Charlotte—Twenty-four new theatres in this area cost approximately $941,000 during the past year. About half that figure was spent on remodeling other houses.

Chicago—Upwards of $1,500,000 was invested in this area for new theatre construction and remodeling during 1938; major portion of activity embracing modernization of properties in Northern Illinois.

Cincinnati—This territory had a boom in theatre building for 1938. About 50 new houses, mostly suburban, were built and furnished at about $750,000. Over $100,000 is the estimate for modernization of old theatres in the Cincinnati area for the year past.

Dallas—Exhibitors of this exchange area invested $1,338,000 in 34 new theatres last year. They spent approximately $500,000 additional in remodeling and modernizing existing theatre structures.

Des Moines—Conservative estimate of amount spent on theatre improvements and equipment in Iowa during 1938 is $400,000.

Detroit—Investment in theatre properties—new construction—for the Detroit area and Southern Michigan amounted to about $2,000,000, $500,000 of which was spent for new equipment, seating, etc.

Indianapolis—Ten all-new houses were erected in this exchange area during 1938, amounting to some $750,000. Approximately 30 old houses were modernized throughout the territory at an expenditure of around $250,000.

Kansas City—The local territory constructed 17 new theatres at a cost of $900,000 in 1938, spending nearly $300,000 on remodeling projects.

Little Rock—Arkansas theatre owners erected about a dozen new theatres at a cost of some $200,000 during 1938. Remodeling represented about $150,000 throughout the state.

Los Angeles—New theatres completed, under construction or announced for building during 1938 represented an investment of around $1,620,000 in this exchange area. Nearly $200,000 was expended for remodeling.

Milwaukee—Some 15 new theatres were erected in this territory during 1938 at a cost of about $250,000—mostly in towns of 1,000-2,000 population. During same period about $450,000 went into remodeling and equipment improvements.

New Haven—Cost of new theatre construction in New Haven (Conn.) territory during 1938 is $225,000. An estimated $315,000 was spent in remodeling and modernization.

New Orleans—Twelve new theatres were erected in this exchange territory during 1938 at a total cost of some $250,000. A half million was spent for remodeling and equipment replacement.

New York—Estimated investment in theatre improvement in Greater New York City and key cities Upstate is between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 for 1938. Three major circuits, Loew's, RKO and Skouras spent nearly $3,000,000 for modernization during past year.

Oklahoma City—New theatre construction in this exchange area during 1938 is estimated at $1,250,000, embracing some 35 new houses. Approximately $660,000 was spent here for remodeling and equipment modernization.

Omaha—Fifteen new theatres are of record for 1938 in this territory, erected at an approximate cost of $275,000. About 30 old houses were modernized at an expenditure of around $500,000.

Philadelphia—Theatre modernization in this area ran around a million dollars for 1938, including nine completely new houses and ten others completely renovated.

Pittsburgh—New theatre construction in this territory for 1938 ran to around $2,500,000. Thirty new houses were erected in Western Pennsylvania and ten in West Virginia. Modernization amounted to something like $665,000 for this exchange area.

Portland—Estimated cost of new theatre construction in Oregon exchange area for 1938 is $115,000, involving three new houses. Some 42 modernizing projects represented an expenditure of about $250,000.

Seattle—Three theatres were erected at a cost of $95,000 and six were remodeled at a cost of $120,000 during 1938 in this exchange area.

CANADIAN REPORTS

Montreal—Depression in picture business mitigated against new construction in this area. About $375,000 was invested in 1938. Reconditioning and re-equipping ran to around $300,000 here.

Regina—Only four small new theatres erected here during 1938 at a cost of about $60,000. Remodeling was negligible; about ten houses were improved at a cost of about $200,000.

St. John—New construction in Maritime Provinces amounted to around $200,000, representing four new houses. Twelve houses were modernized at an expenditure of another $200,000 estimated.

Toronto—Nineteen new theatres were erected in 1938 at a cost of about $1,390,000. About $555,000 was spent in this area for remodeling and modernization of old theatres.

Vancouver—Approximately $375,000 was spent on construction and outfitting for nine new theatres. Six houses were modernized and re-equipped at a cost of around $185,000.

Victoria—During 1938 the Capitol and the Plaza were reseated at an expenditure of $12,000. Redecorating of the Atlas and the Capitol theatres amounted to about $3,000.

A Forecast of STRUCTURAL FORM and FURNISHINGS

By Ansel M. Moore

ANY attempt to accurately foretell the future as it may apply to theatre form and furnishing must logically be based on a careful observation of current trends—and significantly upon human reactions to such trends as they may appear at present.

There is little doubt that we are currently in the midst of a renaissance period in which theatrical traditions are being renounced and overthrown daily. And this applies particularly to the properties and appliances of theatre operation.

The upset to the traditional is largely due to the fact that showmanship as many have been taught to practice it is no longer effective on the public mind. The picture business has lost much of the glamour and novelty that formerly sustained income at the boxoffice, with little need for the support of anything besides the expletives and superlatives of high-powered pressagency.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE ANGLE

The theatre owner today is left largely on his own. He must sell his product and maintain the prestige of his institution the same as a merchant of any of our more common commodities. He must compete for his business, not only with his contemporaries; but he has many counter-attractions with which to contend.

Therefore, to survive successfully, he is faced with the obligation of rendering a service to the public—a service that is expressed not alone in good picture entertainment well advertised and presented, but in the facilities he may provide for the comfort and convenience of his public.

Thus the physical properties of the theatre—the public service angle of entertainment sales promotion at the theatre—must be taken into serious account in attempting a forecast of the future in theatre form and furnishing.

The remarkable public reaction to modernization of properties is well known to all. Business revivals in many lines of commerce and industry are directly traceable to plant modernization. In our own business—that of merchandising entertainment—we can observe its effect. Theatre property modernization is invariably productive of immediately increased patronage wherever it has been capably applied. Instances of business revival are numerous in the records of new theatre construction and modernization of old structures during the past five years. Thus we have the observable trend upon which to base a plausible forecast of the immediate future.

The new year of 1939 will be a good year for theatre building and physical property improvement. Reading the palm of its predecessor, 1938, and tracing the before-mentioned trend, we observe certain fundamentals which when considered collectively will largely govern the year's construction activity and perhaps bear great influence on theatre business in the future. Therefore, let us cite a few of these observable factors for whatever they may mean to us at the moment.

NEW QUEST FOR QUALITY

First and fundamentally, we discern a deepening of interest in quality as it pertains to the properties of showmanship. Theatre owners are definitely abandoning cheapness and superficial values in the construction and furnishing of their houses. Gilt and gaudiness is giving way rapidly to common sense and refinement. Theatres are being designed, built and furnished for efficiency and public service rather than for mere showiness alone.

Another indication that portends a still brighter future for theatre business is the obvious abandonment of caste in theatre planning and construction. Not so long ago there was very little in common between the so-called "de luxe" or "atmospheric" cinema and the small capacity neighborhood or small-town picture show. The aristocratic theatres have relinquished much of their individuality, and atmosphere, of the functional sort, is to be observed in many small and even remotely located theatres. Quite apparently the industry has awakened to the fact that intrinsic House Appeal is applicable to all classes of theatres, regardless of size or situation.

In general appearance—eye values, so to speak—the contemporary cinema, and its progeny of the future, need make no apologies to previous standards. The modern motives in architecture plus the application of modern functional materials have placed it far ahead of all precedent. Environmental control is the secret of house appeal in our new theatres of today and tomorrow. Strictly atmosphere theatres in all classes have all but been eliminated. Extraneous eye attraction or decorative distraction is no longer allowed to compete with the exhibition of pictures on the screen.

Thus we visualize a moving picture theatre in which all attention is focussed on the business at hand—entertainment. In this plan for entertainment is to be found a coordination of physical elements such as desirable seeing, audible hearing, physical comfort and all else that contributes to complete relaxation during a performance.

THE PATTERN FOR PLANNING

A brief departmental analysis of the prevalent type of modern theatre, proceeding from front to rear, may provide some interesting angles on what the picture theatre of the future is to be:

The Front: Primarily a promotional element, designed to attract attention and arouse interest at maximum distances day or night; to impress and impel patronage; to provide means for the exhibitor to display his wares most advantageously; informative, inviting; a point-of-sale advertising medium; colorful, captivating; conveying the exhibitor's estimation of his patrons' good taste. An artistically designed facade with all the functions of astute outdoor advertising display—dominating its locality with ample luminous display.

The Lobby: A transitional element through which patrons are moved and managed. A welcoming gesture to incoming patrons and an invitation to come again. An impersonal vehicle by which the paying guest is transported from reality to the illusion that awaits him on the screen. A circulation room or passageway that affords unusual opportunity for creating good will and prestige during approach and departure; a hospitable, interesting room for the cordial reception of the public; furnished in good taste for convenience of customers; a secondary advertising medium for coming events.

The Lounge: An admirable gesture to the comfort-minded majority; a place to park overflow patronage in an environment that makes waiting more pleasant; a room for personal inclinations and relaxation; a meeting place for patrons at appointed times; here comfort and convenience are provided in every detail; decorative effects and furnishings herein are subject to closer scrutiny and leisurely inspection, so quality and good taste are apparent. Adjacent toilet rooms are provided with modern fixtures and facilities that emphasize sanitation. Attempts to camouflage uncleanness are no longer tolerated. Air conditioned all year 'round.

DESIGNED FOR ONE PURPOSE

The Auditorium: An efficiently planned and well conditioned arena that subjugates itself entirely to the importance of the screen. A room that serves its purpose best when its appointments are completely ignored during show time; yet pleasing to the eye at interlude. A room that completes the screened illusion with unobtrusive refinements and decorative restraint. Comfortable seats that cause the patrons to forget they're sitting; aisles softly carpeted to prevent traffic disturbance; walls and ceilings scientifically shaped and acoustically treated for good sound reception at all points; sightlines carefully computed for utmost screen visibility from all angles; air conditioned for year 'round comfort, draughtless, automatically controlled temperature; lighting that serves the illusion as well as the factor of seat-finding during the performance; decorative effects that blend harmoniously with all appointments; cleanliness maintained throughout.

A combination of practical efficiency and decorative beauty is evident in the auditorium of the Avalon Theatre, in Charlesville, Texas. The architects were Morgan & Moore, of Dallas.

The Projection Room: The department around which the modern theatre is planned is no longer a two-by-four tool room provided as an afterthought and quite appropriately termed "the booth." The projection room of our trend is a more spacious, carefully planned operating room, designed to attain the utmost in the mechanics of moving picture reproduction. It is built of sound- and fire-proof materials, adequately ventilated and outfitted with the best available machinery and accessories to reproduce faithfully that which has been recorded on the film. Projection and sound equipment of the most advanced type is characteristic in the modern theatre, and installations are made under ideal working conditions for those in charge.

AN OBVIOUS CONCLUSION

Summarizing our observatory analysis, we find theatre owners and managers becoming steadily more property conscious and maintenance minded. Heretofore, many of our picture theatres have been so restricted in their planning for efficient operation and so inadequate in the provision for human comfort that they have been handicapped in assuming their rightful position as a public utility. The more profound conception of property values on the part of ownership as expressed in recent structures augurs well for the further advancement of House Appeal in 1939.

Careful planning and adroit selection of building materials and equipment have set a distinct pattern and the design for entertainment in the future is not difficult to follow. In current projects, whether all new construction or remodeling of old structures, attention has been centered on definite functional standards which determine the excellence of future theatres as to architectural form and outfitting.

Cleaning modern materials and fixtures make the men's room of Chicago's Esquire Theatre a model of sanitary application to the theatre's needs. Pereira & Pereira, architects.

... and Some of Us are TRYING VERY HARD...

By W. L. Pereira, Architect

SOME exhibitors still regard the services of an architect as a luxury. I've talked to many of them who are quite certain that architects' fees must be added to their estimated cost—and if they do use an architect, they finally settle on the lowest fee they can find. I've never seen a really progressive or creditable piece of work result from the combination.

When an architect undertakes a building commission such as a department store, residence, office building—in fact almost any structure but a theatre building—he can usually expect to find the whole job on his shoulders. If it's good he gets the credit—if it's bad he gets what he deserves.

At any rate, he is hired for what he knows, and generally speaking, the owner is too busy with his own tasks to become an architect. The owner will usually find time to make decisions, pay his bills and verify the fact that the architect warrants his continued confidence.

But for a great deal of theatre building, the conditions are somewhat reversed. The owner usually has too much time on his hands—or delegates someone else who has too much time on his hands—and everyone involved knows more about theatres than the architect. He, poor fellow, couldn't be inventive under the circumstances even if he had the ability. Consequently we see very little advancement in theatre construction and plan as the years go by.

MODERN ARCHITECTURE

I've heard many exhibitors remark that "modern is going out" or ask, "Do you think modern will last?" I'm stupid, I suppose. But I've never seen the perfect theatre in design—the structure from which we are to always take our cue. I can't even say that the million-dollar ones should be built again just as they are.

Modern is not a style—it is not a cloak with which to cover a frame in lieu of Baroque, Spanish or what have you. It is our age's response to new formulae, new conditions, new hopes—in terms of architecture. We cannot forever stretch traditional details of a past age over our new forms.

Perhaps the contemporary theatre isn't well solved yet—but it will be—and some of us are trying very hard. Whatever we do is at least more interesting than doing the same thing that our forefathers did. (And you know, of course, that they didn't have the opportunity to even see a movie.)

When I speak of "modern" in such hopeful terms I don't mean a wild assortment of "skyscraper" setbacks, hysterical colors and gobs of strong geometric patterns in carpet, metalwork and plaster relief. Even our forefathers' inventions in architecture are preferable to that.

Incidentally, I've seen quite a few exhibitor-as-well as architect-designed theatres that exemplify that point. You've seen them, too. Please pray for a highly selective tomorrow—with me; and let's have it strike at a time when no one is inside. It's bad enough to look at one of those theatres without being buried in it.

If you let your architect make an intelligent plan—the best plan—then let him project suitable and beautiful materials up from the plan—then let him light the plan and materials—you will have at least a contemporary theatre. It needn't be prophetic, but it will probably be original.

COMMENT ON COSTS

No exhibitor, architect, or builder builds the same theatre substantially cheaper than any other exhibitor, architect, or builder. Not even in the motion picture business can anyone do magic with a theatre building. One theatre costs less than another usually because those responsible for the project are either willing to do with less or don't know their requirements.

A theatre frequently costs more than another constructed to fit the same requirements because labor and materials are higher, because the analysis has dictated greater size in one or more rooms, or because money is wasted on useless tricks or embellishment.

There is a marked difference between economy and cheapness. While that statement is true in almost any business—in buildings the difference is invariably and often cruelly obvious. Beware of architects, builders, salesmen and exhibitor-architects whose slogan is "amazingly low cost."

You pay for what you get—and in a building with its thousands of parts, there are more ways to cheat than even the smartest may suspect. And—architects—beware of exhibitors and theatre builders who know how it's done. You may get your fee—but you'll have grief from start to finish and a bad name to boot. Never take a job on the premise that you are to do it cheaper than a competent colleague was able to do it.

When an exhibitor and an architect pool their knowledge on a survey of a proposed theatre building, they should first strive for the perfect theatre from an operating, material, construction and equipment standpoint. If it costs too much—then cut—but both can use judgment on what is cut—and more importantly, both will know what is cut!

We usually find the real theatre man—and the sincere and competent architect able to do more for a dollar than the "exhibitor-architect" (you know who I mean) and his hand-maiden, the guy who stamps out theatre plans and is able to turn them out for a tenth of what it costs "us racketeers."

Frequently the odds are against us—because over in his corner with him is the material concern that designs his fronts, the insulation concern that makes his acoustical survey, the equipment company that lays out his booth, the electrical contractor who lays out his wiring, the heating and air conditioning contractor who does the mechanical engineering, the seating company that makes his auditorium plan and gives him his floor curve, the steel fabricator who does his structural engineering, and the "fixer" at the building department who lets him get by with dangerous code violations.

Besides all this—he has time to go around and copy our pitiful original efforts and stick a "hunk" of them here or there in his job. At the wind-up, of course, he has a painting contractor who'll make a colored sketch to show the owner what all that "stuff" is going to look like when it's assembled. It's odd, though, that despite all that help (which is free to him—and not to the owner), the "exhibitor-architect" never does a real piece of architecture and invariably does a cheap job—never an economical one.

When we first did theatres, I cursed him—now I'm glad he exists—because so many exhibitors whom I know deserve him. And I've had the pleasure of watching them fraternize and take one another. "Happy landing"—I say!

ALL THEATRES ARE DIFFERENT

We have never found two theatre problems so identical in every respect that the same structure could possibly result. The type of people in a town or community is a variable, the lot size is a variable, the management is bound to be different, the physical approach is never the same, the surrounding architecture may differ in scale, opposition factors are terribly important, gross potential affects the considered investment, local materials and available labor affect design and cost, and the present or predicted character of surrounding buildings all tend to prove the point.

And that point is what makes theatre architecture one of the most fascinating fields available to our profession. It is also that point which establishes theatre architecture as one of the least lucrative fields for sincere and competent architects. The more theatres that are done, the less troublesome are a great many of the technical considerations, but the more inclined the architect is to carefully weigh the above factors and with each successive job, he spends more time.

That is the principal reason why experienced theatre architects decline to compete on a proposed theatre with the judgment to be based entirely on pretty pictures and approximate estimates. To do so would be comparable to a doctor's making a pet diagnosis in ignorance of what is wrong with the patient.

It may be interesting to see what factors entered into the design of a particular theatre. Apparent from our preliminary sketches presented here, the entrance or orientation of the building with regard to traffic and available parking area was important.

The theatre was to be located at a central point among a group of large suburbs outside one of our principal cities. The population expected to patronize the theatre derives its income from employment in the city. As a body, they are proportionately the most affluent workers in the city. They are people of better than average taste and are commuting in order to improve their living conditions.

Because their living conditions are at a comparatively high level, such people demand that any venture, regardless of type, entering their group of suburbs, must respect the architectural values of the community. They all possess adequate means of transportation which will convey them to any section of the city where something exists that fills their needs. Commutation-minded, they will not patronize a theatre only because it is convenient.

However, it is believed that a theatre constructed in this location, if it possesses a feeling of spaciousness and provides facilities which will contrast with the "tight" plans necessitated by crowded city real estate—if in fact it carries out through its architecture the same contrasting elements that prompted these people to move to the suburbs—it will warrant their loyalty and secure their patronage. Space doesn't permit a discussion here of the whys and wherefores of an original piece of work as against one of a so-called traditional and somewhat residential character.

The owners are original, interested, willing, and, I hope, competent. They realize that today's problem in the management of almost any theatre is to create and foster the habit of attending one theatre. With the product available to so many theatres of varying admission prices, the theatre building and its management assumes ever greater importance.

The people for whom they build in this case are not exactly admission price conscious; however, they are service conscious. For the most part, they have particular or peculiar loyalty to their suburb and their fellow suburbanites. They apparently enjoy seeing one another. Their likes and dislikes are, strangely, more nearly similar than those found in a factory community.

All of this, plus many other things, adds up to our solution to the problem. You may have solved it differently, but I feel sure you would have considered the same facts. That's what makes a horse race!

How, then, to solve the problem? The solution is to create a feeling of spaciousness and provide facilities which will contrast with the "tight" plans necessitated by crowded city real estate—if in fact it carries out through its architecture the same contrasting elements that prompted these people to move to the suburbs—it will warrant their loyalty and secure their

An Architectural Forum on THEATRE FORMATION

The design for entertainment as it appears to those who plan theatre projects, with an eye to profitable operation and prestige for the moving picture industry.

"Will you let us have promptly a statement of approximately 250 words expressing your professional views on some particular phase of theatre planning, the importance of which you believe should be emphasized to theatre owners and prospective builders at this time" . . .

In those words, members of the Architectural Advisory Board of The Modern Theatre Planning Institute were asked to express their candid opinions on the most important considerations of theatre planning and construction at this time. To encourage a variety of opinions on a diversity of phases, the question put was purposely not a leading one. It was designed to draw out individual opinion on the "most particular phases" of theatre planning as each man might see them.

We now introduce our collaborators and reproduce their responses to the question, confident in the belief that among the answers may be found the solution to several problems that may now, or perhaps later, confront our readers.

ARNOLD E. BASCHEN, of Arnold E. Baschen & Associates, Hannibal, Missouri:

"To point out any one phase of theatre design or construction as the most important feature to be emphasized to theatre owners would be difficult since there are so many important features, such as attractive fronts, effective advertising display, proper arrangement of floor plan to eliminate confusion in admission to and exit from the theatre, a good air conditioning system, effective acoustics and good sound equipment, good vision, clean rest rooms, and a number of others which should all be coordinated for a perfect theatre.

"However, since there must be a 'most important' phase of design, if I were 'pinned down' to choose that one, I would say that good vision is most important.

"My reasons for choosing good vision as feature number one? I believe that all the new patrons who might be attracted to the theatre by an attractive front, good advertising, or other features, will be lost if they must be uncomfortable while in the theatre.

"The most uncomfortable experience one can have in a theatre is to be forced to lean to one side or the other to see around the person in front of him, and then by straining his neck all possible, he is able to see about half of the screen. He leaves the theatre with a stiff neck and feels that he really has not seen the picture in spite of his trouble and discomfort, and he will hesitate to go again even to see the best of pictures.

"The floor slope should be designed to permit good vision from any part of the auditorium. The slope should be specially designed for each individual theatre. It is much simpler to construct a perfect floor in a new building than in remodeling an old one, but even in extremely difficult remodeling projects, it is always possible to improve the floor slope considerably."

J. M. CORGAN, of Corgan & Moore, Dallas, Texas:

"A short time ago, I asked the head of the construction department of a large theatre circuit why his company did not employ an architect on all remodeling work. The answer was: 'The first thing an architect usually wants to do, unless he is familiar with theatre design and construction, is gut the building and start all over again. The ordinary architect usually does not know enough about theatre design and construction to utilize those parts of the structure which need not be torn out.'

"That statement, in a few words, explains the reluctance of the average theatre owner to employ an architect on remodeling as well as new construction work.

"Ordinarily, unless an architect is well acquainted with structural requirements as well as maintenance and physical operation of the theatre, he will cause the owner a lot of unnecessary expense and end up with a building unsatisfactory for use as a theatre. He will want to tear down and build new walls, instead of using the old, by placing steel columns inside to carry the roof loads. He will want to close the theatre for a long period of valuable boxoffice time, instead of figuring out a way to accomplish the desired effect without loss of time.

"The loss of time is not always necessary. For instance, two years ago we designed, planned the fabrication and supervised the installation of a 275-seat concrete and steel balcony in a theatre, and lost only one matinee of showing time. In this instance, the boxoffice receipts during the time of construction paid for over three-fourths of the total cost of construction.

"When planning new theatres or remodeling old ones, it will be dollars in the pocket of the owner if he retains a capable theatre architect."

HENRY E. GREENSPOON, of Eliasoph & Greenspoon, Montreal, Canada:

"Closely connected with the question of comfort in motion picture theatres and a subject that has hitherto not received the attention that its importance would seem to merit, is the question of adequate sight lines and proper floor slopes.

"In the development of the cinema, these factors seem to have been neglected or were never seriously or scientifically investigated due to the similarity of purpose and influence of the legitimate theatre, within whose walls most cinemas throughout the country will be found.

"The condition is also possibly due to the fact that the cinema until the advent of talking pictures was being tolerated only as a temporary form of recreation or a fad that would not last.

"Today the cinema has earned its place as the star of the recreation industry and is a definite part of our cultural development. For this reason it behooves us to erect theatres that will adequately fill the particular need required in the industry and to improve or eliminate poor visual or seating conditions in existing structures from earlier decades.

"Past practice has condoned conditions requiring spectators to look between the heads of those in the row in front of them, and over the heads of those two rows in front (second row vision), thus necessitating uncomfortable adjustment to shifting obstacles, especially when action pictures shift from one side of the screen to the other.

"Theatre architects today are mostly concerned with the patron's maximum enjoyment of the performance both auditory and visual. This last condition demands that the spectator be at ease, neither feeling bodily discomfort nor peculiar strain.

"Intimately associated and a factor in obtaining this result are numerous other factors which we shall not consider at present, such as type of seat, aisle arrangements, chair spacing and balcony pitches, all very important in their effect on the psychological reaction of the patron."

MARK D. KALISCHER, of Chicago, Illinois:

"To me the most interesting development of modern theatre design is the emphasis being placed on patron comfort as compared to the old-fashioned idea of stressing ostentation and over-decoration. In the old days, as much money was frequently spent for no-coco plaster ornamentation and expensive draperies as is spent today for an entire theatre job.

"Today a modern theatre is equipped with summer and winter air conditioning, chairs that give the utmost in comfort with spring seats and backs, toilet rooms that are the last word in sanitation with walls of gleaming tile or glass, the finest porcelain plumbing fixtures and electric driers; smoking rooms for men and women, and spacious lounges and ladies' powder rooms.

"The incidental furniture too is designed with an eye to comfort and utility rather than in imitation of some highly carved, ornate gold-leaf decorated throne chair.

"Even the lighting is strictly functional and is designed to relieve eye-strain. If we were to enter 99 out of 100 of the pre-war cinema palaces, we would still find enormous crystal chandeliers suspended from the lobby and auditorium ceilings, a throwback from the days of candles and oil lamps adapted to electrical illumination. Contrast this with the simple, functional, modern lighting scheme which today becomes an architectural element with the source of light concealed.

"The result of all this is the comfortable, intimate theatre of today, where we may sit and enjoy a pleasant evening 'at the pictures' under almost ideal conditions of bodily comfort as well as comfort in seeing and hearing."

KARL F. KAMRATH, of MacKie & Kamrath, Houston, Texas:

"To owners, operators and prospective builders of theatres, an architect's point of view on specific problems should be of definite interest. In dealing with theatre design in general, the portion of the theatre the public observes is usually so hideously ugly with unartistic forms and raw colored ornamentation that the patron can scarcely see beyond his own nose. The commonplace repetition of the same treatment both in plan and detail makes for trite and uninteresting buildings. Theatre owners should maintain an open mind to new ideas in order to effect distinctive and lasting results.

"The general plan arrangement of theatres can be entirely rearranged to conform to the new type of architecture in which form and mass result from function. Functional architecture is not ornate nor 'modernistic.' It is a type of architecture where things are placed where they belong to form masses which are pleasing to the eye. Thus, it is less costly, more impressive and easier maintained than any other type. The time is not far off when builders of theatres will realize the importance of clean-cut, well-proportioned modern design that will undoubtedly result in increased boxoffice appeal.

"As far as theatres are concerned, the public taste in architecture is better now than it was several years ago, and patrons will continue to demand better design. The builder first to realize this and build accordingly should be decidedly in advance of his competitors. A thought that should be kept in mind at all times is that ornateness and gaudiness do not make as good an impression on the public as does the simplicity of good modern design. Simple treatments are always best if well done and they have the added virtue of being less costly.

"Why not let the theatre builder advance to the position of leading the public to become conscious of good design in his building rather than having to do so by the demand of his patrons?"

EDWARD PAUL LEWIN, of Chicago, Illinois:

"Since July, 1933, The Modern Theatre section of Boxoffice has been advocating the remodeling of out-of-date theatres as a needed stimulant to receipts at the boxoffice.

"Having convinced the exhibitor that House Appeal was imperative, rehabilitation at first was confined to modernization of the exterior, installation of better sound and projection equipment, improved heating plants and adequate air conditioning systems.

"Lately more attention has been given to the lobby, foyer and auditorium by means of redecorating, new carpeting, new furniture and new lighting fixtures, yet not enough effort has been made to improve the location and size of toilet room space, to say nothing of lounges, smoking and cosmetic rooms. In these cases, the exhibitor may have found that meeting new theatre competition with more spacious rest rooms would necessitate expensive structural changes, and, in most instances, acquiring additional space, which may or may not have been available. He may have discovered also that it would be much more practical to build an entirely new theatre.

"Of course, the location upon which these old theatres stand has been established and it may not be desirable to try another. Should that be the case, wrecking and rebuilding would be most advisable. Otherwise, we will undoubtedly find our solution by acquiring vacant property very near to the site of the present theatre and possibly developing a building which will embody enough commercial space to make the development a very lucrative building project."

HAL PEREIRA, of Pereira & Pereira, Chicago, Illinois:

"Too many theatres! It is sad that there are too many theatres in most sections of the country. There are also too many old-fashioned railroad day coaches, too many frame houses, too many dirty street cars, too many obsolete hotels; in fact there are too many of a lot of things when they've outgrown their usefulness.

"Would you take an old railroad day coach? No, you'll drive—even though the coach will get you there. But you will take an air conditioned streamliner—lots of people do—statistics prove it.

"Lots of people stay home and listen to their radios rather than go to the thrice remodeled (and still unsuitable) opera house—or the same old 'wedding cake' movie theatre—to see a picture. Why? Because the thrill of going or being somewhere is gone. If you were a patron, you'd be tired of it, too.

"The railroad doesn't move its tracks when it adds a 'Streamliner.' No, it keeps the tracks (people know where they are)—and takes off the old train. We have too many theatres because we never tear down the old outmoded theatre in a good location. We build a new one—down the street or a mile away—ask the public to see the first-run productions in our old house—and try to tease them into seeing what they missed by giving them a new (cheaply constructed) second-run house.

"There aren't enough first class or modern first-run houses—just too many theatres!"

H. A. RAAPKE, of Omaha, Nebraska:

"In theatre planning, patronage and how best to attract it, is of prime importance. The theatre architect knows that a well-designed facade is essential as a drawing power; therefore it must be modern, distinctive, simple in design yet colorful enough to be outstanding.

"The trend is toward masses of larger units, easily cleaned and replaced, and not too costly. Translucent in character so as to present the same appearance at night as in the daytime but with no visible source of direct lighting apparent.

"The canopy in its prevalent clumsy form of a top-heavy billboard type is doomed to pass. In its place will be a double ribbon of letters, on a canopy shaped for showing the present and coming attractions, all in harmony with the new materials of the facade. No heavy canopy with roof, ceiling, tin boxes or exposed electric soffitt bulbs will be tolerated.

"The ticket booth with only a small stoop will add considerably to the attractiveness of the entrance and all necessary exterior lighting for the entrance and sidewalk approaches will come from the translucent facade with its mystical lighting effect in various color combinations.

"The trend toward refinement, simplicity, economical construction and low upkeep is here. Only an experienced theatre architect can interpret it successfully for the theatre owner."

MASON G. RAPP, of Rapp & Rapp, Chicago, Illinois:

"The last few years brought into the theatre industry many bad examples of an uncoordinated, unlasting type of architecture involving the use of impermanent materials and one which strives to live under the guise of 'modern architecture.'

"This has been forced by the many theatre owners who have created a new theatre investment or improved an old one at the 'lowest' possible cost, believing that they have saved a great deal of real money. However, this 'saving' is usually reflected in a faddish and impermanent architectural type that will soon wear out and in a few years confront them with another problem of modernization. It is obvious that they have hurt their investment and the entire theatre industry by the use of a temporary measure that will not have lasting public appeal.

"The advanced architectural talent of the nation is always working hard to stay ahead of the times and produce well-coordinated solutions of the theatre problem. They will plan and design with an eye to better screening and comfort of patrons, to allowing more ease in management and to efficient physical plant operation. They will develop these elements into an acoustic physical form and create a tasteful and rich simplicity in a character that will last in the eyes of a critical, observing public.

"I believe that 1939 will bring more cooperation from theatre owners and their realization that the architect must bring a permanent character of design to a public which is educated to seeing on the screen the results obtained by the splendid design talent employed on the Hollywood lots."

VICTOR A. RIGAUMONT, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania:

"Better and more modern small theatres in neighborhoods and small towns, built to a price permitting profitable operation on cheap land, with plenty of parking space around each site, is my forecast for 1939.

"The small theatres of today are still the relics of the past. Progressive small theatre operators will modernize their thoughts and theatres to keep pace with the ever-growing improvements in mass entertainment and customer demands.

"The question of beauty and adornment will be subdued by the all-important question of comfort. Every theatre should have air conditioning, both for winter and summer use, with clean fresh air throughout all seasons. Projection equipment and screens and sound should have eye and ear appeal because they are the heart and soul of the show. Perfect acoustical treatment will be born in many theatres now sadly lacking in this particular phase of House Appeal.

"All new buildings should have bigger and better projection room quarters and bigger screen stages for the inevitable installation of television equipment."

BEVERLY W. SPILLMAN JR., of Spillman & Spillman, San Antonio, Texas:

"In remodeling an old theatre or building a new one, the most vital consideration for the owner is the comfort of the public.

This may be accomplished by several major construction details: First, proper incline of floor and correct height of stage; second, where a balcony is required, there must be a proper location of balcony both as to height and to projection over the first floor; third, the proper location of screen as well as due consideration for its size as compared to the height and width of the theatre and distance from the "proscenium." Of course, one should consider the spacing of seats to give maximum leg room.

"The considerations mentioned are well known to the individual theatre owner, but there are numerous other problems in architectural design that are equally important and ones that have a rather abstract quality. The design and decoration of the interior walls and ceilings of the modern theatre should be of such character as to focus the patrons' eyes on the screen without the usual clashing effects of highly ornamented walls and ceilings. A much more restful condition will result from these qualities. Lighting should be subdued but decorative in its color and locations. Of course, the acoustical qualities, heating and ventilating of the interior should be given close and careful study also.

"In our frank opinion, today more thought should be given to the really abstract for the comfort of the audience, rather than the concrete formulae of everyday construction."

The newest Newsreel Theatre, in New York City, stresses comfort and beauty of surroundings as its bids for patronage. The small, intimate type of house is exemplified in its functional design.

- ★ NO MORE STANDING UP!
- ★ PATRONS CAN ENTER OR LEAVE SEATS EASILY WITH NO ANNOYANCE TO OTHERS!
- ★ ADDS TREMENDOUSLY TO COMFORT AND SAFETY

This Revolutionary New Seat Pays for Itself Over and Over!

If you want to boost box-office receipts, investigate this new and amazing Kroehler Push-Back Theater Seat. It is such a startling improvement in comfort and safety that it will make your theater the talk of the town—and pay for itself in increased attendance.

A simple thrust of the feet retracts the seat of this new Kroehler Push-Back Seat to let others pass. There is no standing up—no annoyance—no waste of space or interference with other rows. When the occupant relaxes, the seat automatically returns to normal position.

Built by Kroehler, world's largest furniture manufacturer, it is absolutely safe and amazingly sturdy in construction.

See these new seats now on display at the following showrooms, or write today for complete information.

★★★★ PERFORMANCE BRINGS REPEAT BUSINESS TO G-E AIR CONDITIONING

Adelphi Theatre

Crest Theatre

Rialto Theatre

Regal Theatre

Walton Theatre

Lyric Theatre

"We are more than pleased," says Mr. David E. Milgram, President and General Manager of Affiliated Theatres Circuit, Inc. "Accept our sincere congratulations for the outstanding Air Conditioning installations made in our Adelphi, Rialto and Walton Theatres."

"Audience reaction has been marvelous," states Mr. Leo Posel, owner of the Crest, Lyric and Regal Theatres. "Hundreds of patrons have told us of their appreciation of our General Electric Air Conditioning System."

These two Philadelphia exhibitors had the same profitable experience. General Electric's reputation for good engineering, competent installation and trouble-free, economical service persuaded each one to insist on G-E for his first air conditioning system. Outstanding performance proved the wisdom of this choice. In each case a repeat order followed. And then another!

Both owners learned by experience that G-E could handle any kind and size of air conditioning job—speedily and to the utmost satisfaction of owner and patron alike.

You, too, will profit by choosing G-E! Let your General Electric Air Conditioning Distributor make a FREE engineering survey of your theatre. His proposal will tell you the true owning and operating costs of your General Electric Air Conditioning installation. Phone (see Classified Directory) or write him today. THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR IN THEATER OPERATION costs the least

The entertainment which brings patrons to your theater night after night is, in the last analysis, just a rapidly changing pattern of light and shadow. The film which provides the shadow pattern is rented, but YOU provide the light. The quality and quantity of that light determines the effectiveness with which the picture is presented. The finest story and the most beautiful photography will often fail to please if poorly projected.

Simplified High Intensity projection provides the best projection light available to the average theater today. Yet the required investment is only $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent of the total investment in the average theater and the operating cost only $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent of total operating expense.

It provides the screen brightness and sharp definition desired by that large percentage of your patrons not blessed with perfect vision. It gives the most realistic reproduction of the increasingly popular color features. It permits a comfortable and safe level of general illumination. Ask your dealer to show you the economy of Simplified High Intensity projection.

ALTEC SERVICE CORPORATION

250 West 57th Street, New York City

COLUMBUS 5-3255

A nationwide independent service organization, specializing in the servicing of sound equipment in motion picture theatres. Altec Service Corporation, having no restrictive affiliations that would make service subservient to the selling of new equipment, provides exhibitors with a completely unbiased service, devoted to keeping the equipment now in use in the theatre at its highest possible efficiency, no matter what the age, the model, or the make of the equipment.

Altec Service Corporation also services radio station transcription equipment, as well as all electronic equipment, such as photo-electric cell devices, sound transmission apparatus, and industrial vacuum tube applications generally.

Altec Service Corporation maintains warehouses and emergency stock points strategically located throughout the country, containing the largest inventory of emergency parts of any organization in the field. Stock points operate on a twenty-four hour-a-day basis.

General Electric makes lamps for every Theatre Lighting Service

GENERAL ELECTRIC makes a lamp for every theatre lighting service. A few of them are shown here. MAZDA lamps made by G-E represent the result of more than 40 years of research and development. Each of them must pass 480 checks and inspections in manufacture to guard against imperfections that might affect their performance in service. Always look for the monogram . For detailed information, see the nearest General Electric Lamp Sales Office.

GENERAL LIGHTING SERVICE lamps fulfill most of the lamp requirements for ordinary theatre use. Made in sizes from 15 up to 1500 watts, and available in certain sizes in clear, inside frosted, colors and daylight bulbs.

MAZDA LAMPS for motion picture projection and spotlight use have extreme concentration of light source. Because of technical improvements including heat-resistant bulbs, small bulb size is possible. Sizes up to 2000 watts.

G-E MAZDA Projector lamp combines a mirror reflector, a light-directing lens, and a 150-watt lamp filament in one sealed-in unit. Available in both Spotlight and Headlight types. Both types list at $1.70.

G-E FLUORESCENT MAZDA lamps give several times more light than ordinary incandescent lamps. For the same amount of light, they are 50% cooler. Available in gold, pink, blue, green, red, white, and daylight.

HOW TO GET THEATRE INTERIORS THAT ARE BRIGHT-COLORFUL-CHARMING-AT LOW COST

Use TEXOLITE— New Principle Paint

Texolite® is a development of modern paint chemistry—a paint with which you can secure colorful, fine appearing, durable decoration at a cost so low and at a speed so fast that it will astound you.

MOST JOBS...ONE COAT

One coat of Texolite will usually cover as well or better than two coats of ordinary paint.

DRIES FAST

No need for you to have your theatre out of order for a week when you decorate with Texolite. Under most conditions it dries in less than an hour.

ECONOMICAL

One gallon of Texolite usually covers from 500 to 700 square feet of finished plaster surface—600 to 800 square feet of smooth, primed or painted surface.

Texolite is available in a wide range of colors. It comes ready-mixed in 9 soft-hued pastels and 9 brilliant, deep colors. With the Texolite Deep Color Mixing Guide and the 40-page book "Modern Principles in Paint and Decoration"—and learn how you can save money on your next decorating job.

Send today for the Texolite Deep Color Mixing Guide and the 40-page book "Modern Principles in Paint and Decoration"—and learn how you can save money on your next decorating job.

Mickey, symbol of the genius of Walt Disney, will be on the screen of the world again in 1939 as will Silly Symphonies and a feature length cartoon—all to be produced in Technicolor.

In Preparation: Samuel Goldwyn's "Blue Valley," a romantic story of love, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Jan Hall and Sigrid Gurieva in Technicolor.

Shooting: London Film's dramatization in Technicolor of A. E. W. Mason's famous novel, "Four Feathers," produced by Alexander Korda.

Shooting: "The Wizard of Oz," favorite fantasy of young and old, produced in Technicolor by Mervyn LeRoy. Judy Garland, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr and Jack Haley head the cast.

In Preparation: The immortal "Bessie Crabbe," an entirely new version in Technicolor of this thrilling desert story of honor among men.

In Preparation: The whole world awaits "Gone With the Wind" to be produced in Technicolor a landmark international by David O. Selznick with an important all-star cast.

Released: "Kentucky" with Lorena Young and Richard Greene, produced by Twentieth Century-Fox in Technicolor. A story of Kentucky's most thrilling event—the Derby.

Shooting: "Dodge City" in American film set in cattle country by Warner Bros. in Technicolor. Leading roles are Fred Flinn and Charles De Haveland, and—Technicolor.
